SLANDER DRIVES MISS MARLOWE FROM STAGE; SOTHERNTO FOLLOW

Unconventional pose of Julia Marlowe, who has quit stage on account of slanderous stories abo ut herself and her husband, E. H. Sothern.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 12.—Julia Marlowe is lost to the stage as a result of the slanderous reports published in the newspapers regarding the reasons for her leaving the Sothern-Marlowe company and hurrying home. E. H. Sothern will follow her example and retire as soon as his theatrical engagements permit.

The announcement was made by Sothern himself after reading a clipping from a New York paper, which stated that he and his wife had parted. He fairly shook with indignation as he handed out the following telegram to refute the report:

New York, Feb. 8, 1914.
E. H. Sothern, Heilig Theatre
Portland:

Dear Partner—Don't mind that you forgot the telegram. Understand only too well how rushed you are on matinee days.

Hope you will not feel too much that long ride to Portland. Rest all you can. We have never rested half enough in our lives. We must begin now. Love,

JULIA.

SWEENEY MAY BALK AT TRADE

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Captain Bill Sweeney of the Boston Nationals did not know this afternoon where he stands. He and his teammate, Hub Perdue, were traded to the Chicago National League Club for Second Baseman John Evers, but Evers declared again today that he won't play in Boston if Murphy, his late boss, benefits in anyway by the deal. President Gaffney and Manager Stallings are spending the day in New York trying to wheel Evers around into line.

In the meantime Captain Bill Sweeney doesn't know where he is at. Words failed him when he was asked this afternoon to discuss the Boston-Chicago baseball trade.

"I don't know anything about it except what I have read in the newspapers," said Bill.

"Have you any objection to becoming a member of the Chicago team?"

"It all depends. Until I find out the conditions I cannot say what I'll do. Just now I don't know where I'm at."

"Have you heard anything from Mr. Gaffney?"

SWEENEY IS IN THE DARK.

"Not a word; but I may hear from him before the day is over. I was expecting to leave for Hot Springs tomorrow morning, and I may go yet, but I want to hear from New York first.

"When I get word from Mr. Gaffney I will be in a position to say what I will do and what I will not do."

There was no semblance of a threat in Bill's voice, but it is evident he wants to know a few things before he consents to a transfer to Chicago.

In New York this afternoon, James E. Gaffney, president of the Braves, said he had appointments to confer with Charles W. Murphy of the Cubs and his former manager John Evers, from which he hoped "there would be decisive results." He said:

I'm anxious to get Evers for Boston and I told him that I would give him a bonus to come, but his personal enmity against Murphy is such that he refused so long as Murphy would benefit.

Evers said he didn't want any bonus; he just wants to keep Murphy from getting anything out of the deal. Evers looks like such a good investment that I told him I would asume his contract with the possibility that he would get more than $10,000 a year.

"FEDS" ARE AFTER EVERS.

The Federal League brought additional pressure to bear today upon Evers to induce him to desert organized baseball. Joe Tinker, immediately upon his arrival from Chicago, conferred with President James A. Gilmore of the league and Charles Weeghman, president of the Chicago "Feds," and then the three sought Evers at his hotel.

Tinker urged him to join the Federals and it was reported that a financial proposition even better than the $40,000 proposition submitted yesterday was made to the Cub star.

Gaffney talked with Evers for some time, but Evers kept shaking his head, and said later that there wasn't a chance for him to sign upon such a basis.

While Gaffney and Evers were in conference, President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club came down and seeing the two together, stepped up, and extending his hand, said, "Well, Johnnie, I

VIOLENCE THREAT IN MYSTERY

William E. English today declared that he had been threatened with personal violence if he told the public where Eleanor Arlin is confined.

His declaration was a bombshell, and it was expected that District Attorney Pelletier's office would take some action to investigate English's statements.

Meanwhile Mrs. Jane Arlin, mother of the girl whose disappearance a month ago has baffled all searchers, was eager to meet English—to plead with him to tell her where her daughter is hidden.

The mother arrived in Boston late yesterday, and Dr. Edmund A. Rogers of Brookline, a relative of the family, hurried her to his home so that she might rest after the ordeal of the long ride down from her home in Colebrook.

WILL TALK TO MOTHER.

English—who says he is ready to talk with Mrs. Arlin if she wishes to come to him—in a statement today told facts hitherto unrevealed bearing on the mystery of the girl's disappearance. In his office at No. 775 Boylston street he pointedly asserted:

Miss Arlin is in a private sanitarium not fifteen minutes' ride from this office. All questions and all criticisms have not shaken my certainty of this; nor my determination not to reveal the name of the sanitarium.

I am silent because I think it is my duty—not from cowardice. I have been threatened with personal violence if I tell where she is, but that would not weigh with me but for the sense of duty which seals my lips.

If I were to tell a tithe of what I know, it would not only create a tremendous sensation, but it would result in grave danger to the girl. Wholly guiltless of any blame herself, she has been made a victim. I fear now that she might be kidnaped and spirited away to some spot where she would never be found. I have tried to keep a watch on the sanitarium to prevent this very thing.

The whole thing is very tick-

COLDEST DAY IN 18 YEARS

Br-r-r-r—

This was Boston's coldest day in EIGHTEEN years!

Again, Br-r-r-r—

Out of the West came the bitter Arctic blast sweeping over the city, carrying great suffering in many places and giving Boston not only the coldest day of the Winter, but the coldest day recorded at the local weather bureau since February 17, 1896, when the temperature was 11.1 degrees below.

The minimum today was reached around 5 a. m. when the mercury had crawled down to 10.6 below. The second coldest day of the season was last January 13—election day—when the temperature was minus 9. The coldest day on record in Boston was January 24, 1882.

Unofficially, the mercury slumped even lower than was recorded on the top of the Federal Building.

Out at Hall's corner in Waltham, an exposed spot but a standard thermometer, the temperature was minus 25 early today.

17 BELOW AT WORCESTER.

At Chelmsford and Topsfield the same temperature was recorded.

Other thermometers tried mighty hard to go as low. Several Waltham thermometers showed 18 below, Worcester had 17 below, Watertown minus 16, and so on.

Some comfort came to the chilled and almost congealing thousands who braved the ear-biting, nose-nipping wind on the streets when the mercury mounted slowly upward towards zero as the sun shone over the city. But it was not for long, for soon came tidings that the cold wave would remain with us at least through tonight with a below-zero temperature. At 1 p. m. the official temperature was 4 above.

Tomorrow, however, the mercury will rise slowly, according to the weather man's prediction. There is also a possibility of snow some time tomorrow.

MANY TRAINS DELAYED.

Thousands of Greater Bostonians suffered from the cold. The commuters were the worst sufferers. At some of the railroad stations scores were frostbitten while waiting for delayed trains into Boston. Others

Finley Shepard Near Death in Crash

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Finley J. Shepard had a narrow escape from death the other night while returning from a visit to White Plains. His automobile hit a trolley car on Glenville curve, where the wooded land on his wife's estate prevented him seeing the car until he was almost on it. He jammed on the brake and so did the motorman. The bumper on his car prevented a smash and neither he nor his chauffeur were hurt. Mr. Shepard was at wheel at the time.

Somerville Fire from Frozen Heater

Philip B. Long, married, of No. 30 Summit avenue, Somerville, started a fire in the kitchen range this morning ignorant of the fact that the water in the hot water boiler was frozen. The boiler exploded knocking Long to the floor unconscious. He was saved by his wife. The fire damage was $200.

CALLS FOR HELP OFF DANGEROUS PEAKED HILL BARS

Sounding repeated calls for help, an unidentified steamship was in distress today off Cape Cod, near the dangerous Peaked Hill bars.

LIFE-SAVERS BAFFLED.

For hours an almost impenetrable fog defied the efforts of life saving crews and the revenue cutter Gresham to reach the distressed liner.

At 1 o'clock the Chamber of Commerce shipping bureau received this message:

"Unidentified steamer stranded, Peaked Hill bars. Peaked Hill life-saving crews standing by."

This report was later corrected by a message stating the life-savers had been mistaken and that the steamer had not gone ashore.

News of the liner's plight created the greatest anxiety in Boston. Fears were expressed for the safety of the crew and possibly passengers.

It was declared the distressed liner might prove to be the Merchants & Miners' steamship Howard, Boston-bound from Baltimore and Virginia ports. On board the Howard are seventy-five persons—passengers and crew.

This belief was based on the fact that the Howard was reported off Chatham early today in a heavy fog and endeavoring to round the Cape. That was the last heard of her.

At 1:30 o'clock the Chamber of Commerce bureau received further word that the unknown steamship was midway between Peaked Hill and High Hill, and that the Peaked Hill lifesavers had been augmented by the crews from Race Point and High Hill.

4 INJURED BY EXPLOSION IN LYNN FACTORY

A carboy of naptha in the packing room of the A. E. Little Company of Lynn exploded today and a man and three girls employed in the factory were painfully burned.

At the burst of flames that followed the explosion, the fifty girls in the room made a blind scramble for the door, and desperately fought their way to the open air.

There was a fine exhibition of heroism just before the explosion. The Naphtha is kept in a five-gallon carboy, and is used in cleaning shoes. An employe went to get some of the liquid and left a torch used in the process near the carboy. When the cork of the carboy was removed, the fumes were ignited by the torch and flames spouted from the mouth of the carboy.

William Phillips was working near. At the first flash and before the explosion, he sprang forward and attempted to force the stopper into the carboy, thus smothering the flames.

He was too late. As he touched the vessel, the naphtha exploded, and from his chin to his feet he was showered with the burning fluid.

WOMAN TELLS OF "ATTACK" BY SENATOR GORE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 12.—Trembling with nervous agitation, the pallor of her face ill concealed by a thick black veil, Mrs. Minnie E. Bond today told the story of the alleged attack made upon her by Thomas P. Gore, Junior Senator from Oklahoma.

Mrs. Bond was the first witness called in her suit for $50,000 damages. She was dressed in black. She frequently raised her veil and placed her handkerchief to her eyes.

Senator Gore and his wife arrived early, the Senator directing that he be led to a seat near the witness stand. Rain did not prevent the crowd of spectators from being as large as yesterday. Many women were in the court room.

INVITED TO WASHINGTON.

In reply to questions by Ross Lillard, her attorney, Mrs. Bond testified as follows:

"I am thirty years old and have been married about seven years. Senator Gore suggested that I bring the application and indorsements of my husband for internal revenue collector to Washington. I did so, going to the capital in company with other Oklahoma people, March 3.

"A few days later I went to Gore's office at his suggestion. I discussed my husband's application with him. During the conversation his conduct became unusual. He talked of nice women continually. He touched me and I moved back. He touched me again and I moved back. Then Gore touched my foot with his hand and I left the office. My next conversation was a telephone conversation March 22 or 23.

REFUSED TO GO TO OFFICE.

"I called him again at his office over the telephone March 24. He asked me to come to his office, but I refused. Then he said he was coming to see me at my hotel.

"The hotel was crowded on account of a school teachers' convention. I had previously made arrangements to receive Senator Gore. The parlors of the hotel were crowded. I saw James Jacobs of Oklahoma City and told him I had no place to entertain Senator Gore. He told me to take him to my room."

"My room was in disorder. Finally Mr. Jacobs offered me the use of his rm and said he wuld be present at the interview.

"We went to Mr. Jacob's room. Gore sat in the only chair in the room. I sat on the bed. Senator Gore asked me about my size and complexin. Then I had a telephone call and talked with a friend about ten minutes. I walked back to the bed. Gore had moved his chair closer. When I sat down Senator Gore sat down. Senatr Gore tried t take hold of my hand. I told him I was not that kind of a woman.

"A THOUSAND PARDONS."

" Itold him he should have more respect for his wife. He said, 'Mrs. Bond, I beg your pardon, a thousand pardons.'

"Then he told me my husband would not be given the position he sought, but ought t be made first assistant. Then Gre tried to pull me on his lap. I remonstrated. I pulled away. He begged my pardon again. Then he arose out of his chair. He threw his hands over my face and pushed me over. My glasses were broken and I cut my hands. I gave a smothered scream and I. P. Robinson burst into the room.

Divorce for Natick Fire Chief Darling

Chief Bernard E. Darling of the Natick Fire Department was granted a divorce today in the Middlesex County Court. The case was uncontested. Darling testified that his wife Effie, whom he married in Natick in 1899, deserted him two years ago. He played detective in leisure hours and traced her to Pawtucket, where he claimed she had been more than friendly with a young man twenty-one years old. She is thirty-four.

FIRST OVER-SEA WIRELESS PHONE MESSAGE TO HEARST

Direct from Berlin to New York by Telefunken wireless station via the Sayville, Long Island, station

Berlin, Feb. 11.

To William Randolph Hearst:

The more Germany and America know each other the greater will be their friendship. This great achievement in communication will immeasurably help and promote such knowledge and friendship.

Thanks for the opportunity to send this message to the New York American, a newspaper splendidly American, always progressive, whether in politics or in the encouragement of inventive genius.

COLDEST DAY OF WINTER IN NEW ENGLAND

suffered from lack of heat in the cars. For the first time this Winter, the Highland branch, Boston & Albany, trains were late, at least one train being about 45 minutes late.

On the Boston & Maine many trains were even later. One Peabody train came in an hour after schedule time.

It was so cold in the South Station that steam from locomotives was suddenly condensed, sending a fine snow onto the tracks and concrete platforms. This was at one time nearly an inch deep.

SCHOOLS ARE CLOSED.

Rather than expose the children to the dangers of colds, sore throats and other similar ailments, the authorities of Dedham, Arlington, Somerville, Chelmsford, Gloucester, Rockport, Malden, Melrose and Everett closed the schools for the day. In Medford the only school opened was the High school.

The chief suffering came through the early hours of the day on the streets of Boston. Here hundreds of the army of the unemployed—men without homes or money, and in cases women and girls—walked up and down, or ran to and fro, in a vain endeavor to get up a little body warmth. Many applied at the police stations for shelter from the piercing cold. At station 5 forty men presented themselves before Lieutenant Daly.

"FREEZING TO DEATH."

"Hey, give me fifty cents for lodging and twenty cents for a meal," one of the men demanded.

"Why should I?" he was asked.

"Because I need it," was the reply. "I am freezing to death."

Lieutenant Daly saw that the man, along with the others, got a night's rest and something hot to eat and drink at the Hawkins Street Home, which was crowded to capacity.

Over the harbor hung a thick fog blanket in the early hours, making all shipping a hazardous matter.

Boston was not the coldest spot on the map today. There were others to keep the city company—and some were even worse off.

There was Greenville, Me., with 28 below at 8 a. m., at which time it was minus 10 in Boston. At Colebrook, Ct., it was 31 below. In the Berkshires the temperature ran as low as 30 degrees below. At Tupper Lake, N. Y., it was 38 below.

32 BELOW AT POWNAL, VT.

The cold wave covered all New England, Northern New York and Canada. The Highland Light observer today reported the coldest weather on the cape in fifty years. The coldest place in New England to report was Pownal, Vt., with 32 below. Every New England station recorded at the Boston Weather Bureau reported a minus temperature today.

At Lewiston, Me., where all records were broken with the thermometers standing at 23 below at noon, one death, that of Ernest B. Palmer, a prominent merchant, was due to the severe cold. Portland had the coldest day in forty-four years with 30 below.

BERLIN PHONES THE AMERICAN BY WIRELESS

Reported for the AMERICAN by "Jack" Binns, the Famous Wireless Operator.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Direct wireless communication with Germany was officially made for the first time last night between stations at Sayville, N. Y., and Nauen, near Berlin, by the Telefunken system for the New York American.

The distance between the two stations is approximately 4,500 miles. The inauguration of this new link between the American and German nations was accomplished when a message to the American was received at Sayville from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin.

In the small wireless hut near Sayville, Robert Prendergast, the operator, sat listening intently with the telefone receivers pressed hard to his ears. Around him stood Lieutenant Alfred T. Plate, who is watching the tests in the interests of the Argentine government; R. H. Armstrong, general agent of the company; Paul Pichon, chief engineer of Berlin, who is here specially for the test; H. O. Boehme, local chief inspector, and the American representative.

"Here's Nauen," he cried excitedly, and then bent over his desk pressing the receivers closer to his ears as he began to write the message. Slowly, in faint, but clear high-toned notes, the dots and dashes of the Morse code sounded in the phones after their 4,000 mile trip across the seas.

The message was received in less than five minutes.

ANOTHER JEW FACES RITUAL CRIME CHARGE

LONDON, Feb. 12.—A St. Petersburgh dispatch to a British news agency announces the arrest of a Jewish tailor named Pashkoff on the charge of murdering last December a lad known as Yoshel Pashkoff, but since identified as the son of a Christian named Taranthevidech.

The arrest took place at Fastoff, only a short distance from Kieff, where Mendel Beiliss was recently acquitted of a "blood ritual" murder charge. While the dispatch does not state that the Russian officials claim the boy was murdered for "blood ritual" purposes, London Jews believe that the Czar's agents will make that contention when Pashkoff is brought to trial.

In December the report was received here that efforts were being made to organize an anti-Semitic outbreak at Kieff.

Firemen's Measure Would Cost $249,283

It would mean an additional expense of $249,283 to the city of Boston and an increase of 238 men in the number of firemen if two bills for more efficiency in fire departments and the promotion of the health of the firemen went into effect, according to former Representative Isaac Gordon, who appeared before the legislative Committee on Cities today in favor of these two bills. Mr. Gordon represents the Russell Fire Club of Boston and the Massachusetts State Permanent Firemen's Association.

Owen P. McKenna, special United States Treasury agent on opium suppression, showed the pipes and opium and urged the passage of the bill.

ARLIN PLOT IS CHARGED BY ENGLISH

lish. I may have to show my hand at any moment. The minute I do—the jig is up.

I actually believe that some of those concerned in this case would go to the length of doing away with Miss Arlin and then permitting the body to be found under circumstances pointing to suicide were they in danger of discovery and exposure.

Their original plan was to restore the girl—eventually—to her mother under the plea that she had been away on a vacation. They still desperately hold to this hope.

RELATIVES IN DOUBT.

It was learned today that there is dissension among the relatives of Miss Arlin—some believing English's story—others utterly discrediting it. Among the former are Mrs. Calvin C. Gould who has seen English—and Miss Marion K. Brown (a friend of the lost girl), who likewise has talked with the man who claims to know where she is.

Dr. Edmund A. Rogers of Brookline, Dr. W. J. Rogers, Mrs. Rogers and others declare there is no truth whatever in English's claim; and it was only on the insistence of Mrs. Arlin that they agreed to arrange a meeting between her and English.

Dr. Edmund Rogers suggests that English, unless he is mistaken in his story, can easily prove it true by producing a single garment worn by Miss Arlin when she disappeared. Until that proof is forthcoming, he refuses to place any credit in English's claim.

The Rogers family is angry at Mrs. Gould because she believes English is right; and they accuse her of intruding without license in the case. Mrs. Gould today persisted in her belief that English knows where the girl is.

Mrs. Arlin, the girl's old mother, is torn between these dissenting camps. She longs to believe English is right; but the opinions of those with whom she is staying have almost convinced her he is mistaken. Nevertheless she today asserted:

HOPES ENGLISH IS RIGHT.

Mrs. Arlin said today:

"I am sure that Mr. English knows where my Mertie is. I shall ask him to prove to me that he knows what I believe is the truth about Mertie's disappearance. If he was able to convince Mrs. Gould so thoroughly, I have no doubt that I shall know the facts in a short time.

"Mr. English has been very kind in writing to me and I know he is too good a man to deceive an old lady like me. I only ask to know that my Mertie is safe and sound.

"I believe that the reward has been withdrawn, as Mr. English said that the organization with which he was connected forbade his accepting any remuneration for simply doing his duty."

BEST WORK COMING

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—"I'm a boy; I'm just learning. I'm going to do some good work some day," said Thomas A. Edison, on his sixty-seventh birthday. He had been kidnaped from his laboratory by his wife, who wouldn't let him work on his birthday.

"The greatest achievement for progress in the last year," he said, "is the obtaining of ammonia by passing hydrogen and nitrogen over red-hot iron. This insures to the world an inexhaustible supply of fertilizer.

"The greatest achievement politically, I think, was the Currency Bill."

'LET ULSTER ALONE,' PLEA OF LONDONDERRY

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Further attacks upon the Home Rule bill were made when the debate on the measure was resumed in parliament today. The Marquis of Londonderry, whose ancestral estates are in Ulster, declared it was impossible to overrate the seriousness of Ulster's opposition.

"Ulster considers it better to face the awful crisis which threatens than to submit to rule by an Irish parliament," said he. "Ulster wants only to be let alone."

TUG POTOMAC FAST IN ICE JAM UNTIL SPRING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Jammed in the ice and with little prospect of extricating herself before Spring, the naval tug Potomac is drifting slowly northward off the coast of Newfoundland, according to Navy Department advices today.

Boatswain Cutting, who with four members of the Potomac's crew, got ashore over the ice yesterday, wired the department as follows:

"Ashore with four men. Ship wedged in ice. Unfavorable to move, but little danger to ship. Can find no way to get stores to Potomac. From information gained do not think it possible for relief ship to reach here."

FRIDAY IS THE DAY!

RIBBONS

FASHION AUTHORITIES PREDICT FOR SPRING 'THE GREATEST RIBBON SEASON IN MANY YEARS'

——Paris sends forth the word that the general trend is for ribbons—ribbons—ribbons—for millinery, lingerie, sashes, girdles, neckwear, vestings, bandings for lace waists. They are used in infinitely varied form for millinery, ranging from the very tall strikingly posed bows to the compact pompons and cockades. Thousands will want ribbons for summery frocks and misty lingerie; for decorating frilly sacques, kimonos and fascinating tea gowns; for little girls' dresses and curls; for fancy work and table decorations.

ONLY NEW RIBBONS—including the novelty colors and patterns—only ribbons in highest favor. We started in buying weeks ago, taking advantage of every turn of the market, choosing only for newness and quality where right prices could be had—often buying very large quantities to get the price. ROXBURY TWINS OF 10 AWAY ALL NIGHT IN COLD

Being twins, the Connors kids—Frank and Willie—do everything alike, even to getting lost and frostbitten.

They are the ten-year-old sons of Mrs. Nellie Connors of No. 1187 Tremont street, Roxbury. They picked up a piece of change at home yesterday afternoon, hiked out gleefully, went to the "movies"—as was later learned—and then started joy riding on the Elevated until they landed in Sullivan Square at 2 a. m.

A Malden-Medford car came along and they took it, riding to Medford car barn.

At 2:30 in the freezing morning car barn men spied a dismal pair of boys shivering in front of the barn.

"Whaddaya want?"

"Wanna get warm," bleaetd the kids, who were cold, hungry and nearer crying than boys like to be.

They were warmed up in the barn, then given to the Medford police, who learned their names and telephoned the Boston police. The boys were kept at Medford police station until their mother arrived there.

"The boys were pretty cold when found, Ma'am," said one of the "cops" to Mrs. Connors.

"Well, they'll be warmed up all right when I get them home," said the worried mother. The twins started away with her, looking rather glum.

QUINCY GIRL TO WED PROFESSOR WHOM SHE MISTOOK FOR TRAMP

Miss Lillian G. Sutherberg, who is to wed Professor H. W. Lawrence of Dartmouth.

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Lillian G. Sutherberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Sutherberg of No. 11 Rawson road, Norfolk Downs, to Professor Henry W. Lawrence of Dartmouth College, has also brought out the fact that the very first time Miss Sutherberg ever saw the professor she mistook him for a tramp, a "hobo."

She was visiting friends near Hanover, N. H., the college town. While riding horseback one day—this was in the Summer of 1910—she met a man walking. He spoke to her—some trivial question of the road—and Miss Sutherberg rather resented his appearance and his speaking to her and—well, she didn't think much of him anyway.

It was not "love at first sight," by any stretch of the imagination. But the girl had stopped her horse to answer the question and it led to another question and it seems that the "tramp" was an honest-to-goodness college professor and a graduate of Yale ('06) and the University of Paris ('09) and was all sorts of a delightful chap and—well, anyhow.

NEW ENGLAND PAYS TRIBUTE TO LINCOLN

All New England united today to do honor to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, and every school, every patriotic association and many business organizations and clubs held special exercises. It was a tremendous tribute.

In the schools the pupils were addressed by members of the G. A. R. and the singing of patriotic songs were among the features. A large number of G. A. R. members spoke in churches and before other organizations. Governor Walsh, after attending the unveiling of the statue at the State House, went to the Vendome, where he was the guest of the ex-regents of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Both Progressives and Republicans held meetings, the former at the American House and the latter at Faneuil Hall. The Lincoln Republican Club held a smoker at which Chairman Edward A. Thurston of the State committee, Elmer A. Stevens, Guy A. Ham, El Mark Sullivan, Calvin Coolidge and Channing H. Cox were among the speakers.

At the request of Governor Walsh all departments at the State House suspended business between noon and 2 o'clock as a tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln.

In the Dorchester High School, the Dorchester Woman's Clubs presented drums and bugles to the Dorchester High School regiment and drum corps.

The firemen held their annual ball at Mechanics Building. District Chief Mulligan of Jamaica Plain and Miss Mary Bird Killoran of Everett, led the Grand March.

Mrs. George B. Rice of Brookline held her tenth annual Lincoln Day reception at her home, No. 247 Kent street.

The Massachusetts Progressive Party Club and the Massachusetts Women's Progressive Party Club planned a banquet at the Lenox tonight in honor of the day and Governor Walsh. Lieutenant-Governor Barry and other leading men were announced as speakers.

The Perkins Institute for the Blind holds a mid-winter concert tonight.

SALEM'S 2 FAT POLICEMEN TO BE REINSTATED

Resolved—By 1,000 Salem voters, that it's a shame to dismiss men who have been in the police department as long as Charlie Childs and Frank Pelletier just because they're a little too much to the embonpoint to squeeze in behind the wheel of the new auto patrol wagon, and

Resolved—That City Marshal Lehan reinstate the men and give them a chance to drive, and if necessary alter the machines so the men can get into them.

These in effect were the recommendations voted at a big town meeting held in Salem last night under the provisions of the city charter, to protest against the recent removal of the two big patrolmen. Pelletier has been a driver twelve years; Childs, twenty-one. Each weighs in the vicinity of 300.

It was a brisk meeting last night; and its resolution will result in the men's reinstatement. It was openly charged that politics, not paunch, was the real reason for the men's dismissal. Dr. Emil A. Cote asked Mayor Hurley point blank:

"Haven't you threatened to 'get' these men, and haven't you let Marshal Lehan stay as a hold over, so that if he didn't do as you said you could appoint his successor and throw him out?"

"Hah," retorted Mayor Hurley. "Never. You must be having a pipe dream."

City Marshal Lehan said it would cost $200 to alter the automobile to fit the men; but 1,000 voters said it had to be done, and that the men must be given a chance. It was a great victory for old General Avoirdupois.

Defective Wires Start Chelsea Fire

The Chelsea fire department had a bitter fight in weather way below zero when at 10 o'clock today defective wires started a blaze in the floor of Congress Hall, at No. 263 Broadway, Chelsea. The building is owned by Harry Bloomberg, and his big furniture store on the first floor suffered $1000 loss from water, while the building was damaged to the extent of $2000 by the fire. The Boston Store on the first floor had a $500 water loss. The building is four stories high—brick.

THREE FIREMEN IMPERILLED AS WATER FAILS

Lack of water pressure, due to the intense cold that chilled the boiler of the engine, nearly cost the lives of three members of the crew of Engine 4 who were fighting a fire in the five-story brick building at No. 21 Haverhill street early today. Two alarms were sounded and the damage was estimated at $5,000.

The first floor was occupied by R. P. Smith & Co., marble workers; the second by John W. Moore, Inc., syrups and extracts; the third by Benjamin Hill, showcases, and the fourth and fifth by George F. Day, machinist.

The thermometer registered ten degrees below zero when Patrolman Buckley of the Hanover street station saw the flames on the second floor and sounded an alarm. The crew of Engine 4 mounted a ladder with an unfilled line and waited for water. A hot-air explosion blew out the windows on the second floor and nearly swept the men from the ladder.

The men bravely stuck to their post while their comrades in the street below yelled for water. Flames surged around the two and their faces and hands were singed. The top of the ladder commenced to burn and when the engine failed to generate enough pressure to drive a stream beyond the window sill Deputy Chief John A. Grady ordered the men to the street and a second alarm was sounded.

The fire appeared threatening at the outset, but the firemen managed to stop it at the third floor. The cause of the blaze is not known.

FIREMEN ARE FROST-BITTEN AT MALDEN FIRE

A driving horse of registered stock owned by Ezra F. Pratt was suffocated by smoke and an $5,000 auto truck for furniture moving, owned by George Stonehouse, was destroyed when fire swept through a two-story wooden stable and garage owned by Stonehouse on Centre street court in Malden, today. Several firemen were frostbitten.

The district is thickly settled with many wood-working shops and tenement houses. The firemen, suffering severely from the freezing cold, battled hard and fast to keep the flames from spreading.

Tenement dwellers packed up goods and made ready to get out and employes in the electric light station nearby watched the fire with lively interest.

The fire started at 3 o'clock from cause unknown. The flames swept through the ground floor quickly and then ate into the second floor, which was filled with dry lumber. The damage was estimated at $15,000.

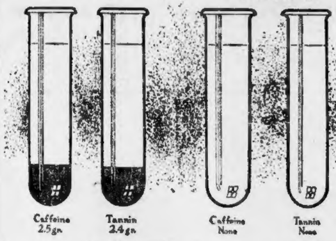
SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Coffee vs. Postum



Caffeine 2.5 gr.
Tannin 2.4 gr.
Caffeine None
Tannin None

Any analytical chemist can prove by analysis, that coffee contains two harmful drugs—

Caffeine—an alkaloid that irritates the heart, liver and kidneys, and upsets the nerves.

Tannin—a drug which produces an astringent action upon the tissues of the stomach and bowels.

But the greatest test of all is made in thousands of homes where it is daily proven by personal experience that headaches, biliousness, indigestion, heart irritation and nervousness are very often caused by coffee drinking.

An ordinary cup of coffee contains about 2½ grains of caffeine, and 2 2-5 grains of tannin.

Some coffee concerns have tried in various ways—without much success—to rid coffee of its caffeine, because they know its harmful effects. Now they are agitated because people are objecting to the presence of tannin in coffee—the same element (but obtained from bark) that is used to tan leather.

The simple, easy way out of coffee troubles is to quit this harmful beverage and use the pure food-drink

POSTUM

It is absolutely free from these drugs or any harmful substance. Made only from prime wheat (roasted) and a small percent of molasses, Postum contains the rich, nutritious values of the grain—is a genuine food-drink.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder. A teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water, with cream and sugar, makes a delightful beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for POSTUM

'CARMEN' HERE FOR FIRST TIME THIS SEASON

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"Carmen" was sung for the first time this season at the Opera last night. There was a superb cast, which included Dalvarez in the title role, Nielsen as Michaela, Muratore as Don Jose, and Mardones as Escamillo. It was the last appearance of Dalvarez this season.

"Carmen," more than most others approaches the perfect opera. Rich, heavy melodies, that are as dramatic as they are agreeable, solid and satisfying orchestration, and the most interesting and fascinating libretto in all opera; it is a master work. Last year we heard another opera by Bizet, composer of "Carmen," "Djamileh", a pale, puny little thing, unworthy of the genius that conceived "Carmen".

Many women have tried to sing and play "Carmen", and few have succeeded. It is a part which calls for an actress of tremendous personality and a singer of extraordinary powers. Years ago these were combined in Calve. Recently we have had Gay, and Garden, both exceptional actresses.

Last night, by Dalvarez, we heard the music of "Carmen" sung in a manner to make the gods delight. She has been highly praised all the season, but this music seems to have been written for her beautiful big voice. Not since Calve has the music been sung in Boston as Dalvarez sings it. Nor are there many who could create the atmosphere of "Carmen" as this woman does, despite her great physical handicap. Early in the season one would have said it was absurd for Dalvarez to play "Carmen" because of her size. She is much too big, of course, and it is a pity she does not diet. Nevertheless it was a "Carmen" to be remembered that she gave us.

Muratore is a splendid Don Jose. His voice is big and right and free. A native Frenchman he has no trouble with the language of the opera which spills so many Italian tenors. His personality is strong and vigorous, and he sings extremely well.

Alice Nielsen as Michaela is bewitching and dainty and sings as sweetly as of yore. Mardones vocally is very impressive as Escamillo. The smaller parts were well taken; Misses Sharlow and Swartz-Morse being particularly admirable. The chorus singing was truly fine, and the orchestra played brilliantly. Caplet conducted.

DE LA BARRA TO BE SUCCESSOR AS PRESIDENT

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 12.—Senator Amellano Melgarejo, a close friend of President Huerta, today admitted that he was on his way to Paris with the resignation of the Mexican dictator.

The document becomes effective as soon as Melgarejo obtains the promise of Francisco de la Barra, former provisional President and now Mexican minister to France, that he will accept the presidency of the republic.

HUERTA IMPOSES HEAVY TAXES UPON MEXICAN CHURCHES

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12.—President Huerta today issued a proclamation imposing heavy taxes upon the churches of Mexico. The money thus raised will be used in paying off the soldiers in the Federal army. With this decree Huerta also obtains revenge on his political foes, among whom the Catholic party has been numbered since the withdrawal of Federico Gamboa from the ministry of foreign affairs.

Reports received here today bring rumors that the Huerta garrison at Tampico has revolted and gone over to the rebels. The government denied the rumors but dispatches from Vera Cruz stated that three American warships were rushing to Tampico because of important developments there.

MEXICAN CHARGE AT WASHINGTON DOUBTS NEW ORLEANS REPORT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The New Orleans dispatch stating that a man representing himself to be an agent of President Huerta had announced he was on his way to Paris to ask Senor de la Barra to accept the presidency of Mexico was received with great interest at the White House, State department and the Mexican embassy.

Senor Algara, Mexican charge d'affaires, said he was inclined to doubt the truth of Senor Melgarajo's statement.

Wright Calls Ocean Flight Foolhardy

Kaiser Orders Salad 'a la Frieda Hempel'

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Miss Frieda Hempel of the Metropolitan Opera House, who, like many blond "frauleins," loves to show her skill in the kitchen, was happy today when she received a letter from Berlin notifying her that potato salad "a la Hempel," bade after her recipe, was awarded the first prize at the Berlin food show. Even the Kaiser ordered his chef to prepare potato salad "a la Hempel" for the royal table.

'UNDER COVER' WILL MUZZLE ANY GROUCH

By WILLIAM STEVENS.

Adventure as a regular diet is rather strenuous, but as a seasoning in life's even tenor, it is spice from the Isle of Romance—incense to the imagination. That is why "Under Cover," which is now being uncovered at the Plymouth Theatre, gently teases the nerves to an evening of thrills and a continuous merging of surprises that make the night bubble with a mirthful, restful excitement. Just healthy "hide-and-seek" exercise of the emotions, that will revive to consciousness the most willfully blase!

It is a joy-maker, a laugh round-up and a grouch-muzzler that will split the lip of old Pappa Grouch in spite of himself. Even the opening scene at "Headquarters" was so nice and cozy that "we" could feel perfectly at home. And the villain (let me whisper in confidence), the chief detective, was so real in the role that his popularity, mounting with the first rise of the curtain, rose to that of a fan's love for a baseball umpire in a world's series by the end of the first act.

We were afforded the ecstacy of being anxious without seriously spraining our hearts; and we hoped that a certain someone was to prove a hero despite our awful suspicions. (I promised not to tell you what I mean by that). Yes, ladies and gentlemen, we were real suspicious, which is a joy we wouldn't trade for a house and lot, in real life. But we were happy in our opinions, because everybody loves a lover—and here was a love affair.

HANDSOME IS AND DOES.

And not the least of good points is that we were collectively and individually relieved completely of the awful responsibility of passing judgment upon the social or moral dress of any dear, good and beautiful lady in the romance.

But there WAS a "Problem"—a peach of a "problem," she was! enough less of a mystery than was the gentleman in the case). Besides, on the stage, beautiful is as beautiful does, with good looks to boot; but I should like to inform all that the lady did and is all that the epigram implies. While I am thinking that, sometimes, it must be great to be an actor, even in the world of make-believe I am sure the hero didn't seem to mind being one.

The climax was so good that I wanted them to do it over again (but they didn't). Also, I am boiling to tell you, but really, it's too rich to tell, even to you, just now! For after you have decided all about how it is going to turn out, and changed your mind about it, and then turned right around and decided that you were right about it in the first place, and you decide in the last ten seconds of the last act that you thought wrong both times—which is very queer, don't you know?

But you'll know that you FELT right. And we'll all be with you. Oh! It was an awful jolt! I'm not over it yet. I have to laugh when I think of it.

HEREBY WARNED.

Should it happen by any mischance that there is any person in Boston who has a pet Grump, whose life he wishes to prolong indefinitely, I warn that particular person not to see "Under Cover." It will kill that valuable Grump! In the middle of the night I was awakened from peaceful slumber with a sharp pain in the side. My wife asked me to please refrain from chuckling—she was sleepy!

Macaroni Factory Burns in Cambridge

Fire caused a damage of $8,000 early today in the macaroni and spaghetti factory owned and managed by Joseph Bicchieri, at No. 87 to 89 Clark street, Cambridge. The fire threatened to spread to the adjoining houses but was held in check by the quick work of the firemen.

BOSTON MEN HEARD ON STOCK EXCHANGE BILL

James F. Jackson, Charles F. Weed and Frederick H. Curtiss, the special Chamber of Commerce Committee which held hearings in Boston on the Owen Stock Exchange bill, presented their report in Washington today to the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency. The Senate Committee was told the Boston Chamber would co-operate with it in bringing about "some reasonable federal regulations of stock exchanges."

While approving the general purpose of the Owen bill, the report points out certain objectionable features of this measure which make its enactment undesirable. One of the objectionable features is: "The grant to an individual political appointee of an extraordinary and dangerous authority over the business interests of the country through absolute control of the management of stock exchanges."

"The measure is further objectionable," continues the report, "in provisions which in our opinion would mean disastrous consequences to legitimate transactions and the crippling of a service that is most beneficial to the public when properly performed."

The report testifies to the usefulness of stock exchanges "in furthering the sale and distribution of securities and in providing open markets through which knowledge of the values of these securities are made known to the smallest as well as the largest investor."

The Chaperon's Chatter

By THE DOWAGER.

The all-important event in society today is the wedding in Concord of Miss Ellen Hoar, daughter of Mrs. Sherman Hoar and well known in the exclusive set of Boston and suburbs, to Stephen Coburn Pepper. The wedding takes place in the First Parish Church in Concord and is attended by all that is most representative of society. The engagement of Miss Hoar and Mr. Pepper was announced the latter part of last March.

Miss Hoar is the daughter of the late Sherman Hoar by his first wife, who was Caroline T. Wood of Concord. The present Mrs. Hoar was formerly Miss Mary Buttrick, also of that historic town. Miss Hoar is a grandniece of the late United States Senator George Frisbie Hoar and of the late Judge E. Rockwood Hoar, who was at one time the United States Attorney General.

Miss Hoar's brother, Roger Sherman Hoar, married Elva Stuart Pease of Edgartown, where the wedding took place last June. Mr. Pepper, who lives in Concord, is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hovey Pepper of that town, where they have a wonderfully attractive home. Mr. Pepper graduated from Harvard last June.

SWIFT SEEKS $100,000 FOR UNEMPLOYED

Morrison I. Swift started today, the coldest day Boston has known for eighteen years, to raise a fund of $100,000, if possible, from the business men, to give work to the unemployed.

Mr. Swift says there are 20,000 people out of work in the city.

He says that there are 2,000 applicants a day for work at the State Free Employment Bureau.

Mr. Swift asked Mayor Curley to get city work for the jobless. The Mayor, after a talk with Louis K. Rourke, commissioner of public works, said that there is a hill in East Boston that can be cut away for filling and that, if a fund can be raised to pay them, the unemployed can be put to work there. The city has no money to spare, said the Mayor.

Mr. Swift said he would try to raise money among the business men. He calls attention to the point that, if new work is found for all the able-bodied unemployed, there will still be a large number of the physically weakened, who will need lighter work, or even absolute relief. Since the city lacks the funds, says Mr. Swift, it is up to the well-to-do citizens to supply them.

MRS. BEIDEL TELLS WOMEN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her in Health for 14 Years.

Shippensburg, Pa.—"It was several years ago that I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I then suffered terribly every month. My husband bought me a bottle of it and it helped me right away. Then after my second child was born I had a female trouble very badly and I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and in a short time was cured and have been in excellent health since. I always praise the Compound whenever I have an opportunity as I know it helped me and will help others. Lately I have given the Compound to my daughter and I wish all suffering women would take it and be convinced of its worth."—Mrs. JAMES A. BEIDEL, 113 N. Penn Street, Shippensburg, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to any of the women whose testimonial letters we are constantly publishing. They will tell you their experience and give you confidence to try the medicine.

Help for the Housewife

A permanent exhibit at 99 Summer Street has been established to give practical information on the preparation of cereals in many ways, to demonstrate their varied uses and possibilities, and to encourage the home-maker to bake her own bread and pastry.

We show in a practical way how HECKERS' CREAM CEREALS and HECKERS' SUPERLATIVE FLOUR make the family health better, and save on the family purse.

You will be welcome.

For Any Hurt

The man who works outdoors should immediately apply Dioxogen to any skin break. It will quickly destroy the poison and do away with all danger of infection.

Don't trifle with the little hurt. Infection may cause blood poison. This is too serious a danger to risk.

Dioxogen

is pure Peroxide of Hydrogen—very different from the common kinds.

You should never risk using common bleaching Peroxide which is good enough for bleaching hair, fur, cloth, but is entirely unfit for personal use.

Does the idea of a bleaching Peroxide on your wounds or as a mouth wash or after shaving appeal to you?

Common Peroxides are generally preserved with Acetanilid—a drug that is prohibited by the Government unless the exact quantity is stated on the label of every package containing it—read the label on the bottle.

Dioxogen is the one safe Peroxide of Hydrogen.

It is always full strength. Never contains acetanilid.

When you buy "just Peroxide" you have no knowledge of the efficiency of that particular bottle.

When you buy Dioxogen BY NAME you know you are always getting Dioxogen purity, strength and stability.

By tackling the puzzle you can kill time by doing time—doing time in the sense of doing a time puzzle. Here's the problem:

"If a calendar clock, which indicates the second, minute, hour and the day of the month shows the correct time at 5 p. m. on Saturday, January 17, and gains 10 minutes daily, what will be the correct time when the clock indicates that it is 5 p. m. on February 17?"

Weakness and Exhaustion Overcome

Says No Other Medicine Gives Such Quick Relief.

"I have used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for the past four years as a medicine and stimulant. During this time I have been confined to my home with elephantiasis, not having the use of my limbs to get about. There are times when I suffer great weakness and exhaustion, and during these periods have never found any medicine so quick to relieve as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, and can heartily recommend it to my fellowmen as a medicine and stimulant."—David B. Solomon, 209 New Street, New Brunswick, N. J.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus producing a predigested liquid food, in the form of a medicinal whiskey, which is one of the most effective tonic-stimulants known to science; its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

This wonderful remedy has been extolled throughout the world for what it has done for suffering humanity. It is not only a stimulant—it is a medicinal food and is recognized as such by physicians. A bottle in the home will save suffering, perhaps life itself.

Be sure you get the genuine Duffy's, in sealed bottles only, at most druggists, grocers and dealers, $1.00. Valuable medical booklet and doctor's advice sent free on request.

SERVIAN DIPLOMAT'S AMERICAN WIFE GIVES KEY TO SOCIETY'S DOOR

Mme. Slavko Grouitch.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Mme. Grouitch, wife of the Servian Minister at London, gave today, on the eve of her farewell to English society, her observations on American women in society abroad. In her opinion, not Yankee dollars but American good breeding and culture have opened the best houses in Europe to her fair compatriots, for Mme. Grouitch is a West Virginian. She was Miss Mabel Gordon Dunlop.

"The popularity of American women in London society is steadily growing," she said. "English society likes American brains. They give a certain snap to society functions that adds immeasurably to the piquancy of the occasion.

BUSINESS MEN SEND NAMES FOR SUNSHINE CLUB

"Every business man should be hopeful," asserts John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Company, one of the latest 1914 Sunshine Club members. That this optimistic viewpoint is held by thousands of others is shown by the numerous club-membership application blanks received. Here are a few of the latest, giving reasons why they wish to join:

JOHN H. PATTERSON, president National Cash Register Company, Dayton, Ohio:—"I am in sympathy with, and wish to be enrolled as a member of your 1914 Sunshine Club. Every business man should be hopeful."

WILFRID PREVOST, No. 35 East street, Holyoke:—"Because sunshine and prosperity give me more courage in getting work."

WILLIAM T. CLARKSON, No. 43 Haverhill street, Brockton:—"Because I like to see every one have and enjoy good times."

"PROSPERITY SURE"

J. B. MARCOTTE, Waterville, Me.:—"It pays to be cheerful and to help cheer others; to look on the bright side."

WILLIAM DUNN, Elizabeth street, Fitchburg:—"I believe that there is nothing surer than prosperity in the future."

M. E. P. Davis, Walnut avenue, Norwood:—"To identify myself with the optimistic crowd, and help bring better conditions."

LOUIS CARCIERI, Wauregan Ct.:—"For success, happiness, a square deal and prosperity to all people."

J. A. LUCIER, Masonville, R. I.:—"Because I believe in the idea, and in the AMERICAN as well."

HENRY J. CANNASS, No. 100 Sherman street, Cambridge:—"Because I like to help make sunshine for every one; to hasten the full return of prosperity."

EDGAR RICHARD, Light street, Lynn:—"To see the day when all shall wear the same smile as the man in the club-membership certificate."

"LOOK ON THE SUNNY SIDE"

GEORGE C. McINTIRE, U. S. S. Constellation, Newport, R. I.:—"The world would be paradise if all looked on the sunny side of life, and didn't harp on their trials and tribulations."

MAXFIELD GREENSTEIN, Water street, New Bedford:—"Good luck to the club. May it bring sunshine to all, and to all prosperity."

MARGARET SUTHERLAND, Barker street, Auburn, Me.:—"Let dead failures and mistakes bury themselves, while we travel toward the land of sunshine."

EDWARD HARRISS, No. 141 Chelsea street, East Boston:—"Although out of work, I believe that one can be happy so long as things go well."

HUB GIRL WHO LOVED ART GETS RENO DIVORCE

Grace Brown Jenkins of Newton, a graduate of the Boston Art School, has been granted a divorce in Reno, Nevada, from Howard W. Jenkins, Tech Chambers. Mrs. Jenkins alleged desertion. She asked to be allowed to resume her maiden name of Grace E. Brown. Testimony involving another woman was offered.

Friends of the couple and Mr. Jenkins himself, who is a dealer in dyestuffs at No. 62 Oliver street, claim that his wife's love for art caused her to seek a separation. Their matrimonial split came about September 22, 1911, when the wife began to discover that what one liked the other didn't care for.

For a time, according to friends, he tried to interest himself in her pictures and when he became bored she tried to grow interested in business problems which he had to combat daily. These conditions soon became threadbare and the couple were further apart than ever.

Mrs. Jenkins was the first to see that they were drifting apart and she decided to free her husband. She disappeared from Boston and for a long while none of her friends was aware of her whereabouts. Early in January word came from Reno that she was established there to seek a divorce.

The separation of the couple, friends say, is what might be termed a mutual agreement to disagree. They decided it the only course open to grant them both the happiness of life.

Can a Woman of 40 Fall in Love With a Man of 22?

READ THIS GREAT SERIAL—BEGIN IT TODAY

THE DEAR FOOL

The Sensational Story of the Love of a Woman of Forty for a Boy of Twenty-two

(Novelized by)

A. A. Waterbury.

From the [illegible] by H. Y. [illegible] copyright, 1914, by International News Service.

HERE IS BETTY DUNBAR, THE COMELY WIDOW AND CENTRAL FIGURE IN THIS SENSATIONAL STORY, WHOSE LOVE FOR A YOUTH BLINDS HER TO THE REAL AFFECTION OF A MAN OF HER OWN AGE. READ HOW BETTY, AFTER NEARLY LOSING ALL THAT IS WORTH WHILE BECAUSE OF HER INFATUATION, IS FINALLY MADE TO SEE THE LIGHT AND CAPTURE TRUE LOVE AND HAPPINESS.

"OH, I want to be happy—I want to be happy!" cried Betty. "I've no right to be getting old. I don't feel it—I don't look it! But I am nearly forty, and Cecil's twenty-two. Only twenty-two, and my son William is just ten years younger. Only twenty-two and I am forty—and yet I love him—I want him!"

A little wistful longing crept into the keen eyes of the gray-haired Englishman as the woman he loved with all a man's passion and strength and devotion confessed to him her love and longing for some one else.

They were sitting in the garden of the Manor House where her sister's charity gave a home to Betty Dunbar and her fatherless boys.

The little widow with her eyes of Irish blue and her mist of raven hair was the very light of life to the smartly clad Londoner in his Bond street morning clothes—and here he must sit like a very ascetic and play confessor to the story of her burning love for—a boy!

A touch of the boyishness every man in love must show crept into Sir Egbert Inglefield's deep voice as he asked:

"Does he know you care at all? How can he be going to Canada, then, Betty?"

"Well, as I suppose the—man—I love is not a fool, he's bound to know that his—friends aren't bubbling with joy because he's going away."

"He'll come back," said Sir Egbert easily. A man can scarcely be expected to think it a tragedy when his rival is borne from the scene of action—the radius of their lady's eyes.

"In five years," said Betty bitterly. "And in a few years I shall be fifty and life will be getting gray. Oh, Eggy, I want to be happy first. I want to be happy—happy—happy!" and she said it so very sadly that the man gave over being sorry for himself, and devoted himself entirely for being sorry for this child-woman of forty whom he loved.

It was just as well that Sir Egbert should have begun practising being sorry for Betty Dunbar, because in the course of the next twenty-four hours that lady was going to need a fully accumulated measure of sorrowful sympathy.

AN EARNEST QUESTION.

Now, being an Englishman, he masked any show of emotion and said quite briskly: "Nobody ever goes away for five years nowadays. Betty, do you really care?" And when he said that his voice grew tender quite of its own accord.

Betty choked a bit, for her eyes held tears very near to shedding, and when those tears were forced back they seemed to get into her voice.

"Oh, Eggy! I don't think I quite understand myself how MUCH I care; I think there's nothing I wouldn't do for Cecil."

She turned away for a little space and leaned her head against the great copper beech that spread its glowing plumage above the log over which her fresh pink linen swirled like a little sunset cloud perched on the floor of the woods instead of floating against blue sky spaces.

"I'm sorry. Oh, my dear, I am so sorry. Does he—does he care?" asked the man in a soldier's tone that carried no hint of his own sorrow.

"I don't know," said Betty dully.

"Hasn't he said anything? Hasn't he asked you to marry him?" and Sir Egbert's tone bore a challenge for any man who would dare to fall short in appreciation of delectable Betty.

"Heaps of times," answered Betty.

"And—won't you?" asked the man, in masculine amazement. To want a thing and be offered it and then not take it is not what one expects of the Betty Dunbars of this earth.

"Of course I won't!"

"Why won't you?"

"Because"—she stopped.

"Because why?"

"I'm forty and he's twenty-two!" she slipped from the log to the grass at his feet and spoke with the quietness of despair.

"He'd look at me one night when I did not happen to be looking at him and he'd say to himself: 'My God, she's old!' What should I feel like then? Oh, Eggy, if only I could be his wife for one year! One gorgeous year. That would be all right."

"Somehow I wish that you hadn't told me all this," said Sir Egbert slowly.

"You think I'm an immoral woman," flashed Betty. "An immoral woman! Well, I suppose I am."

"Oh, no, you're not. You're just—a woman! A real woman, Betty. You're in love and you want to be loved. It's very natural. Dash it all, I'm in love, too, so I know how you feel."

"You can't, Eggy. You see, you're you—and I'm I—and you never could guess this feeling I have for Cecil. It's awful how I want him!"

"And yet you won't marry him."

"I won't marry him. Now, don't you understand how great that love is? Eggy, I'm not the utter fool Ethel thinks I am, am I?"

"Most assuredly not. We're all fools, if it comes to that, even the solemn conclave in the drawing room talking politics with Sister Ethel. But you're a dear fool, anyway—a dear fool, Betty, dear!"

And Sir Egbert Inglefield smiled down on the little woman who with a pittance of only four hundred and ninety pounds a year had yesterday refused his own very eligible self, and who, at forty, was loving with girlish abandon and recklessness an impecunious youth of twenty-two who had been bundled off to Canada to try for his fortune. What a very "dear fool" she was, he thought. In her girlhood she had married all for love, and a world of money had been well lost, since that match was against her father's wishes. When old Troughton died he had clinched his disapproval of Betty's match by leaving all his money to the older sister, Ethel. Ethel kept her sister and the two young imps, Bill and Jack, at the Manor, and that their dependence might not be too evident allowed them a definite sum in pounds, shillings, pence. Dependent on Ethel, she had refused to marry either the boy she loved or the man who could so well care for her. A dear fool, indeed, was winsome Betty Dunbar, thought the man who loved her.

"You're a dear fool, too; that's why we're such friends, Eggy. You're the only person I ever have to talk to—I'm so lonely now and then, in spite of my dear boys, that I wonder—wonder—if I will do something desperate—foolish—wild—some day."

"You won't—you'll leave that to the boys. Whew! what's that?"

"That" was a siren in the hands of the "young imp," Jack, an engaging cherub of ten, with dimpled brown knees peeking out from his kilts.

Though he and William solemnly assured Betty and Sir Egbert that every one would think it was cats, the hard, cold face of their aunt, Ethel Troughton, as she appeared coming down the path from the house, betokened that she knew better than to attribute the infernal din of the siren to those midnight marauders—cats.

"Boys, stop that foolish racket!" commanded Aunt Ethel. "Betty, I had a note from Lord Murdon," minced Miss Troughton consciously. "He's coming over to lunch."

"Lady Annie again—oh, Archibald!" said Jack, in even a more mincing tone.

A HARD FACE.

"How often have I told you not to speak of Lord Murdon as Lady Annie?" asked Miss Troughton, with reverence for the title overcoming her scorn for the impecunious weakling who held it.

Her hard face hardened a shade more. Its austere lines never relaxed. She had inherited cool, impartial judgment of men and things from her money-lending father—and to this she added an almost impersonal hatred of the world that had yielded her no warmth of love or emotion. Perhaps she almost hated her sister, since Betty had felt so richly the passions that had passed the thin, haggard older sister by—perhaps she felt that Betty's possession of two splendid boys was an affront against her own life, enriched as it was by nothing but money. Betty's dower of beauty and of human love and human ties did not endear her to Ethel. And far apart as the sisters were today, the day was not distant when the poles themselves would not be further removed from each other than sister heart from sister heart.

"He's always called Lady Annie since he danced those skirt dances at the Town Hall," explained Bill.

"That was for charity," added Betty.

"Which covers a multitude of sins," concluded Sir Egbert.

"But it didn't cover his knees; they were sickening—Why do they say 'bloated aristocracy' when his legs are like hairpins?" asked Jack.

Their aunt looked at them with unrelaxed severity.

"Please leave off talking about Lord Murdon. I came out here to tell you something, Betty, and I've forgotten what it was. Oh, yes—Cecil's leaving sooner than he intended, he sails tomorrow."

A moment ago—whatever the diversity of their interest, they had been a family group. Now suddenly, at a message delivered coolly in Ethel's usual harsh and unsympathetic tones, Betty was swept far out of the backwater of family life into the wild sea of her own emotions.

"Tomorrow—it isn't true," she moaned.

"Lady Smale told me herself less than a half an hour ago that her brother sailed tomorrow," went on Ethel like the very trump of doom.

"Tomorrow," said Betty.

She stared hopelessly into the hideous vista of "tomorrows" without Cecil. She had known this must come, but womanlike she had lived in the happy present and dismissed the "shadow before" of the future. And now "tomorrow" had come—"tomorrow" that would take Cecil and all her dream and hope of love from her.

"Yes, tomorrow," said Ethel as indifferently as if she were not acting as lord high executioner to her sister's little dream of joy. "His plans have been altered. Well, I mustn't stay talking with you—childish people. I've some letters to write."

"Tomorrow," said Betty.

True, Cecil was but two and twenty and she nearly forty. True, she had always said she could not marry him. True, she had known that he would some day—some day soon—go to Canada. But every woman who loves unhappily hopes that somehow there will be a miracle that will give her her heart's desire. For what cataclysm of nature she had waited Betty scarcely knew—but now "tomorrow" had come. This was the end.

"Oh, Betty, I nearly forgot," added Ethel from the gateway. "There's a telegram for you—it was brought to me just before I came out."

"A telegram—oh, Ethel!" cried Betty in quite a different tone from that which had moaned again and again—"Tomorrow." Perhaps after all—the miracle had happened.

Fifty-Sixth Chapter

WE reached Ellan towards the close of the following day. It was the height of the holiday season, and the island seemed to be ablaze with lights.

Two motor cars were waiting for us at the pier, and in a little while we were driving out of Blackwater through congested masses of people who were rambling aimlessly through the principal streets.

Our way was across a stone bridge that crossed the harbour at its inner end, and then up a hill that led to a headland overlooking the sea. Within half an hour we drew up at a pair of large gate posts which were much decayed and leaning heavily out of the perpendicular.

The chauffeur of the first of our cars got down to open the gate, and after it had clashed to behind us, we began to ascend a very steep drive that was bordered by tall elm trees. It was now almost dark, and the rooks, which had not yet gone off to the mountains, were making their evening clamour.

"Well, my dear, you're at home at last, and much good may it do you," said my husband.

I made no answer to this ungracious speech, but Alma was all excitement.

"So this is Castle Raa! What a fascinating old place!" she said, and as we drove through the park she reached out of the car to catch a first glimpse of the broad terraces and winding ways to the sea which had been reflected in her memory since she was a child.

I felt no such anxiety. Never did a young bride approach the home of her husband with less curiosity, but as our motor car toiled up the drive I could not help seeing the neglected condition of the land, with boughs of trees lying where they had fallen in the storms, as well as broken gates half off their hinges and swinging to the wind.

The house itself, when we came in sight of it, was a large castellated building with many lesser turrets and one lofty octagonal tower, covered entirely with ivy, which, being apparently unshorn for years, hung in long trailers down the walls, and gave the whole pile the appearance of a huge moss-covered rock of the sea planted on a promontory of the land.

NEGLECT AND DECAY.

As our car went thundering up to the great hall door nearly the whole of the servants and some of the tenant farmers (under the direction of the tall, sallow man who had been my husband's guardian in former days, and was now his steward) were waiting to welcome us, as well as Lady Margaret Anselm, who was still reserved and haughty in her manner, though pleasant enough with me.

My husband nodded to all, shook hands with some, presented Alma to his aunt as "one of Mary's old school friends," (a designation which, as I could see, had gone ahead of her) and then we passed into the house.

I found the inside corresponded with the outside in its appearance of neglect and decay, the big square hall having rusty and disjointed armour on its wainscotted walls and the mark of water on the floor, which had come from a glass dome over the well of the stairs, for it had rained while we were on the sea.

The drawing-room had faded curtains over the windows, faded velvet on the square sofa and stiff chairs, faded carpets, faded samplers, and faded embroidery on faded screens.

The dining-room (the sedate original of my father's rather garish copy) was a panelled chamber, hung round with rubicund portraits of the male O'Neills from the early ones of the family who had been Lords of Ellan down to the "bad Lord Raa," who had sworn at my grandmother on the high road.

I felt as if no woman could have made her home here for at least a hundred years, and I thought the general atmosphere of the house was that of the days when spendthrift noblemen, making the island a refuge from debt, spent their days in gambling and their nights in drinking bumpers from bowls of whiskey punch to the nameless beauties they had left "in town."

They were all gone, all dead as the wood of the worm-eaten wainscotting, but the sound of their noisy merry-making seemed to cling to the rafters still, and as I went up to my rooms the broad oaken staircase seemed to be creaking under their drunken footsteps.

My own apartments, to which Lady Margaret conducted me, were on the southern side of the house—a rather stuffy bedroom with walls covered by a kind of pleated chintz, and a boudoir with a stone balcony that had a flight of steps going down to a terrace of the garden, which overlooked a glen and had a far view of the sea.

On the opposite side of the landing outside (which was not immediately off the great staircase though open to the view of it) there was a similar suite of rooms which I thought might be my husband's, but I was told they were kept for a guest.

ON THE BALCONY

Being left alone I had taken off my outer things and was standing on the balcony, listening to the dull hum of the water in the glen, the rustle of the trees above it, the surge of the sea on the rocks below, the creaking of a rusty weathercock and the striking of a court-yard clock, when I also heard the toot and throb of another motor car, and as soon as it came up I saw that it contained Aunt Bridget in the half-moon bonnet and Betsy Beauty, who was looking more than ever like a country belle.

When I went down to the drawing-room Lady Margaret was pouring out tea for them, and at sight of me Aunt Brdget cried:

"Sakes alive, here she is herself!"

"But how pale and pinched and thin!" said Betsy Beauty.

"Nonsense, girl, that's only natural," said my Aunt Bridget, with something like a wink; and then she went on to say that she had just been telling her ladyship that if I felt lonely and a little helpless on first coming home Betsy would be pleased to visit me.

Before I could reply my husband came in, followed shortly by Alma, who was presented as before, as "Mary's old school-fellow;" and then, while Betsy talked to Alma and my husband to his kinswoman, Aunt Bridget, in an undertone, addressed herself to me.

"You're that way, aren't you? . . . No? Goodness me, girl, your father will be disappointed!"

Just then a third motor car came throbbing up to the house and Betsy, who was standing by the window, cried:

"It's Uncle Daniel with Mr. Curley and Nessy."

"Nessy, of course," said Aunt Bridget grumpily, and then she told me in a confidential whisper that she was a much-injured woman in regard to "that ungrateful stepdaughter," who was making her understand the words of Scripture about the pang that was sharper than a serpent's tooth.

How to Darken Gray Hair

By a Specialist.

A very satisfactory preparation which darkens gray hair and acts as a corrective agent for dandruff and other diseases of the scalp can be made at small expense and in your own home by dissolving a small box of Barbo Compound in 7 ounces of water and then adding an ounce of bay rum and a quarter ounce of glycerine. Any drug store can furnish these ingredients. This is to be applied once a week until the hair is sufficiently darkened, then every two weeks to keep the hair soft and glossy and the scalp in a healthy condition. It may be used with equal success in darkening the beard. This is a preparation that gives splendid results, both as a hair darkener and a remedy for all scalp disorders, and is well worthy of a trial. You will find it far superior to the ordinary store preparation and much less expensive. —Adv.

SAVE YOUR HAIR! IF FALLING OUT OR DANDRUFF—25-CENT DANDERINE

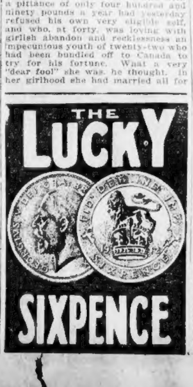
Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—anytime—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.



Save Time!

Time lost because of headaches, lassitude and depressions of biliousness, is worse than wasted. Biliousness yields quickly to the safe, certain home remedy—

'SLAVERY HAS NOT YET GONE,' SAYS ELIOT

"Nobody can do his best work unless he is in love with it," said former President Eliot of Harvard at the dinner of the Efficiency Club of Boston at the City Club. "No driving," he added, "will produce good results. We are not far away from slavery. Slavery has not yet gone out of the world.

"Wage earning was a great improvement upon slavery and it is a comparatively new improvement. We must find something better than the wage system.

"Under the union doctrine every motive to efficiency is wiped out. We shall never get on to any high degree of industrial peace and efficiency so long as millions of men are brought up to union ideas. We must get rid of these domineering ideas of the unions.

"How shall we do it? By profit sharing. Profit sharing interests all ambitious and competent workmen. Profit sharing goes to the root of the difficulty."

Brigadier-General William Crozier, chief of ordinance of the War Department, condemned labor leaders as detrimental forces to the progress and betterment of workingmen.

"In seventeen months prior to a few months ago," he said, "we paid $22,000 in premiums over the above regular wage scale in the vicinity of the Watertown Arsenal. The men have made an average from 25 to 30 per cent. over their regular wages. It isn't easy to find out if the men are satisfied. Labor organizations do not like the system and they always fight the increased activity of the individual.

"Understand me, I am not criticiz- the union but its methods. Under the present industrial system I should certainly belong to a union. But in view of what we have done at Watertown for the men I feel that methods of the labor leaders should not apply.

"A union cannot conduct a successful strike against the government, at least at Watertown. The leaders therefore employ another method. They bring political pressure upon the administration and upon Congress."

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The recent hearings at the State House have given the representatives of at least two automobile associations in this city ample opportunity of exhibiting their value as well to permit of the acknowledging of interesting side remarks which have no reference whatever on the measures under consideration by the Committee on Roads and Bridges. This was edifying, to say the least, but it really took up a lot of time that might have been spent in intelligent discussion of the problems before the committee.

The conditions of the local business is perhaps best shown by the statement of Manager M. F. Our experiences in Boston have been most gratifying. We having sold more Stutz cars to date than we have at any other period of our existence."

AMERICAN'S EXPERTS TO ILLUSTRATE NEW DANCES FOR SOLONS

Amelia Burnham and partner, dancing "la furiana." (photograph by White.) Lucille Perry Hall in fancy dance. (Photograph by Marceau.) They are among the experts who will demonstrate before legislators Saturday.

A remarkable exhibition of modern dancing—the Argentine, the Maxixe, the Hesitation and the Castle Walk—will be given next Saturday night at Le Petit Trianon, No. 280 Boylston street, for the benefit of members of the Legislature who are considering Representative Lewis R. Sullivan's bill to bar the "tango" dances.

The exhibition has been arranged by the AMERICAN; and the best known dancing masters in Boston will demonstrate the right way to dance the new dances. Those who have already arranged to appear are Lucille Perry Hall, Lilla Viles Wyman, Amelia Burnham, Le Roy Young, Pauline Chamberlain, Harold Whitney, Mrs. C. R. Richmond and Fannie Faulhaber.

There will be others, however, and these experts will in turn demonstrate the beautiful new steps—the Argentine, Maxixe, Hesitation and Castle Walk.

Representative Sullivan will bring a deputation from the Legislature to see the exhibition, and there will be a limited number of guests. Admission is by invitation only.

Besides the exhibitions of the new steps, Amelia Burnham and Le Roy Young will give an exposition of fancy dancing; while there will also be dancers to show how the tango appears in the dance halls.

It is against the dance hall tango that Representative Sullivan's bill is aimed. Although it specifically forbids several of the new dances by name, he has declared he will be satisfied if as finally adopted it forbids all dancing which is not conducive to propriety.

CANADA HEARS AMERICAN PLEA FOR BULGARIA

LONDON, Feb. 12.—"I have just had a striking instance of the influence of the AMERICAN'S appeal on behalf of the Bulgars," said Constantin Minoff, secretary of the Bulgarian legation in London today, in conversation with the AMERICAN correspondent. "A man living in Winnipeg sent me a check saying he had seen the appeal for the refugees in the Hearst newspapers and desired to help.

"I would like to state the case from our standpoint. We are ordinarily a poor people, we have just come through two devastating wars, which, apart from the enormous expense, cost us 50,000 or 60,000 lives, representing 40,000 bread winners of families. The present state of the country, therefore, is easy to imagine.

"Probably many Americans say we started the war and must, therefore, bear the consequences. We admit we are the culprits, but it is not for ourselves that the appeal is made; it is for 150,000 poor people who are our guests for the time being.

"They are not our countrymen, but nevertheless they are in a state of most terrible destitution and starvation. We wish we had the means to feed them; unfortunately it is impossible, for our own people also are hungry. When we get the next crop then we hope to have sufficient for all.

"At the present we are trying to settle them, but many of our villages were burned by the Greeks and Servians. We hope to absorb them eventually.

"America has not been asked to shoulder a perpetual burden. It is only a question of two or three months, and as the work is one of humanity I do not believe there could be a better cause."

Crothers Declares Women Have Victory

Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers, speaking before 150 members of the Cambridge Political Equality Association, at the home of Mrs. Ralph Barton Perry, No. 138 Irving street, Cambridge, declared that the great revolution which opponents of suffrage predicted was already a thing of the past and that the women have won, being already man's competitor, successful in every line.

FIND COMPASS OF MONROE WAS NOT ACCURATE

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—Captain Johnson of the Monroe, which was sunk in the recent collision with the steamship Nantucket off the Virginia coast, when forty-one lives were lost, admitted, at the trial of Captain Osmyn Berry of the Nantucket, that his compass was inaccurate.

Captain Berry pleaded not guilty to the charge of negligence. He is charged, specifically with failing to reduce the speed of his ship to avoid the collision; failing to ascertain whether the wireless operator was on duty, and with being careless in not ascertaining whether any other vessels were close by.

As in the Titanic disaster, it is expected that the inquiry will result in certain changes being made with relation to the navigation of vessels, at least in coastwise trade. While primarily Captain Berry is on trial, the board of inspectors has instructions from the Department of Commerce to make a thorough inquiry into every phase of the collision, with the view of the enactment of Federal laws to assist in preventing a recurrence of similar disasters.

Captain Johnson, when asked his views on the efficiency of the wireless in locating vessels in fogs, said it was a great help.

He added, however, that wireless operators do not bother about messages they hear unless they are directed to the ship. Some operators, he said, do not answer questions about the location of their ships. The trial is being conducted by B. A. Sargent, inspector of hulls, and David H. Howard, inspector of boilers.

Albert Lee Thurman, solicitor of the Department of Commerce, represented that department.

Captain Berry was represented by counsel, as was the Old Dominion line, which owned the Monroe.

WHY THE "SPIT BALL" CAN'T BE EXPLAINED

Science discovers that the peculiar behavior of the ball which has puzzled so many batsmen depends entirely on the laws of chance.

IN SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

ELOPES ON HER WEDDING NIGHT!

Alice Yorke, of Broadway fame (alias Suzanne Portal) was about to leave the church, after marrying Taylor Holmes (alias Marcel Durand), when the hitherto happy couple encountered a former sweetheart of the young husband, an actress known as Cecil Cunningham (alias Sydonie De Mornay). He told her the bride was the wife of his friend, Joseph Phillips, the best man, and to extricate himself from a peculiar predicament he eloped with his bride. The incident has provided the excruciatingly amusing plot of a New York Casino musical comedy success, "The Wedding Night," with Walter Jones as the funny father-in-law, to be seen at the Shubert Theatre next week. The wedding is notable for a half a hundred stunning bridesmaids who have never before strayed out into the world away from Broadway.

PROPOSED NEW TENNIS RULE
LIABLE TO STIR UP HORNETS'
NEST AT NATIONAL MEETING

WALTER CAMP'S COLUMN

National Lawn Tennis Association to Take Up New Rules on Amateurs at Big Meeting Tomorrow: Question of Expenses for Players Threatens to Stir Up Hornets' Nest.

Written Expressly for the Boston American.

By WALTER CAMP.

TOMORROW, February 13, at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, will be held the meeting of the National Lawn Tennis Association. The proposed officials' new amateur rule, as drawn up by Palmer Presbey and others of the committee, is stirring up a hornet's nest, and the question is whether it will be able to carry a two-thirds vote of the association.

The proposed rule allows the payment of legitimate expenses of competitors in only three special classes of tournaments and makes such payments illegal in all other classes. Seymour of the Pittsburgh Athletic Club, Kinney of the Seventh Regiment of New York and several others are already out with statements looking with disfavor on this proposition, and several declare that such legislation is likely to unfairly limit contests, and they mean to put up a strong fight against such class legislation.

* * * * *

SOUTH COMING TO THE FRONT.

WHILE every one is realizing the great industrial development of the South, only those who are in touch realize the progress that is being made in that section of our territory athletically. In fact, close observers believe that the South is going to surprise the North just as the Pacific Coast has surprised the East, and for similar reasons.

The United States is now really dependent, and was last year, for its championship material in tennis upon the Pacific Coast. Every now and then a team of athletes journey from that land of sunshine and surprise the middle West and the far East with their ability. The same condition prevails in the South, except that its population is more scattered athletically, and it has not yet had the peaceful times in which to develop that the Pacific Coast has enjoyed.

* * * * *

GOLFERS "OPEN UP" THE SOUTH.

THERE is an annual Winter exodus of thousands of golfers, who, as soon as the first touch of cold weather comes, begin their pilgrimage. Hot Springs, Va.; Pinehurst, N. C.; Aiken, S. C.; Augusta, Ga.—all these places begin to fill up with the Northern exodus, which then pushes on farther down into Florida—Jacksonville, Belle Air, Palm Beach and Miami—and this Winter golfing pilgrimage has developed more knowledge of the South; nor is it the visitor alone who is athletically inclined. Scattered through all the States are football and baseball teams, and many of the best stars of the North have come from southern ranks.

* * * * *

SOME SOUTHERN STARS.

THE "Sally League" is always a developer of good baseball material, and sent North the star of all in Ty Cobb, which reminds one also of a fact, not generally known, that J. R. Parrot (recently deceased), who was Flagler's right-hand man in projecting the railroad over the Keys, was one of the most prominent rowing men at Yale, sitting in Louis Hull's crew in '88.

"Polly," as he was familiarly known at college, was as powerful physically as he proved himself later mentally, and was one of Jacksonville's best products.

Stretching over into Texas, we find even there a marked development and the football there played was of such a quality as to attract one of the strongest middle West teams last year, Notre Dame.

The visit of that team to Texas still further stimulated the interest, and in Dorias and Eichenlaub created an excellent impression as to the quality of middle West football in that section.

* * * * *

FOOTBALL STARS FROM THERE, TOO.

THEN, too, there has been some good material in southern ranks this year. The University of Texas has a seventeen-year-old halfback, Simmons, who promises to be a real star. He stands over six feet in height and is fast.

Ralph Glaze, the old Dartmouth player, has been coaching this team. Over in Louisiana at the university there is a star centre in Dutton, probably the best pivotal man in the South today. Captain May of Arkansas is a strong halfback.

Adrian Van de Graeff, a man who graduated from Yale in the early eighties, and who played football on the "second" up North in his day and generation, has given three sons to university football in Alabama, and all of them good ones. This is to say nothing of Vanderbilt and Sewanee and other teams which have journeyed North.

In fact, as baseball players have developed, so will it be with football, and the South in the next two years will show a development that may surprise the northern universities.

School Notes

[illegible] will see the annual hockey battle between Andover and Exeter at the Arena Saturday afternoon. This year's game promises to be one of the best ever played between the teams of these ancient academies, as both schools are represented by clever teams and on paper appear to be very evenly matched.

The entire student body at Andover will attend the game, leaving Andover on the 1:22 train. The Exeter contingent, about 200 strong, will leave on the 11:32.

The cold weather of the past few days has afforded the players of both teams a chance to get in a lot of practice, and they will be in the best of condition to put up a slashing contest.

There is great interest in the game, because many Greater Boston boys will be seen in action. George Lewis, one of the greatest hockey players ever developed in Greater Boston, will play for Exeter, as will George Percy, the former star of the Arlington High team. Charlie Comerford, the former Brookline High player, will also play for the Exonians.

Newton High is the favorite in the Triangular League championships, in which Brookline High and Cambridge Latin will be the other competitors. The meet will be held in the Newton High gymnasium, tomorrow night. Newton has an evenly balanced team, and good men who appear to be point winners in nearly every event. Entries for the events follow:

'Kid' Elberfeld Coming Back

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 12.—It was learned here today that Norman (Kid) Elberfeld, formerly third-sacker of the Highlanders and the Senators, had practically agreed to terms with a National League club.

HOCKEY NOTES AND GOSSIP

The Pilgrim A. A. hockey team will probably get an opportunity to play in Cleveland if it is successful in its game against the Forest City seven. All the players are in favor of the trip and they will work their hardest to chalk up a victory. A date has been offered the Pilgrim A. A. for a game in Syracuse early in March.

The manager of the Dartmouth hockey team has written to the manager of the Arena asking for a date between the 15th and the 22nd of this month. Dartmouth is willing to play any seven that may be selected. Amherst Aggies, Pilgrim A. A., Tufts and the Irish-American A. A. were mentioned in the letter as possible opponents.

Bobby McLean, champion amateur skater of the world, will appear in an exhibition race at the Arena this evening. McLean competed in a series of races and exhibitions here last season and made a great impression upon the lovers of skating in this city.

The Ottawa College seven, claimants to the college hockey championship of Canada this season, will play in Boston on February 21, meeting the B. A. A. The original plan was to have the Canadian collegians appear in two matches here, but the Ottawa manager could not agree to such a long stay.

Manager Lenagee of the Arena has written the Toronto Rowing Club hockey manager, inviting his team to come to Boston for a game or two. This team has been cleaning up all the amateur hockey sevens in Canada this year and ranks up among the best.

Ralph Whitten, the clever Pilgrim A. A. player, always looks up on the wall in the lobby as he enters the Arena. He has made such a hit this season that the management has hung a big picture of "Ralph" just over the box office. Nice picture, Ralph.

Captain "Spider" Fynan sent all of his Pilgrim players home early last night with instructions to idle in and get a lot of rest. The Pilgrims will have their toughest game of the season when they meet the Cleveland A. C., and Fynan wants every player at his best in order to win.

New York Bill Asks for Sunday Baseball

ALBANY, Feb. 12.—A bill to pave the way for Sunday baseball games between State League clubs has been introduced in the Legislature. The measure, which has the backing of the State League, provides that the question whether baseball shall be played on Sundays between 3 p. m. and 6 p. m. shall be submitted to the voters of any second or third-class city in which the league maintains clubs.

GAFFNEY STILL SEEKING EVERS, OFFERS BONUS

want to congratulate you for getting with Boston."

Evers didn't even pass out his hand in response, but simply said, "There is no cause for congratulations. I am not going to Boston under such arrangement suggested."

And there the incident closed.

Some of Evers' friends in Boston feel Evers is now acting and speaking as he does when he is having a "run-in" with the umpires, and that he will eventually calm down and allow the trade to Boston to go through. His only reason for balking is that he doesn't want "Chubbie Charley" Murphy to make a penny out of the deal.

One man who would like to know what Evers is really going to do is Captain Bill Sweeney of the Braves. Sweeney has his transportation in his pocket to leave Boston tomorrow for the Hot Springs, but if he is traded to Chicago he will have to hold himself in readiness for orders from Hank O'Day. The Cubs are scheduled to leave Chicago for Tampa on Monday. Hub Perdue also is dancing the hesitation.

SWEENEY IS MUM.

Sweeney, when seen today, refused to comment on the situation.

The news that Stallings would consider trading such big favorites as Sweeney and Perdue will surprise many Boston fans. Even those who consider Evers a smarter ball player than Sweeney will wonder if the fiery Evers and the fiery Stallings will make a good team.

All the same, trades are the life of baseball, and thousands of fans who havent visited the South End grounds for years would go through the turnstiles in April to see Evers in a Boston uniform.

Evers is popular in Boston. The fans respect such a game fighter and tireless worker as he. The fact that Evers has a hasty temper and is as liable as not to throw sand at the umpire and yell himself suspended for three days, adds, after all, to his value as an advertising card.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PLANS FIGHT TO REMOVE CHARLEY MURPHY

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Relations between the American and National Leagues have become strained and if things continue there may be an open rupture.

Ban Johnson's organization is disgusted with the way the Nationals have conducted their affairs and has reached the conclusion that unless Governor Tener can purge his organization of the trouble-makers, peace in the ranks of organized baseball cannot continue.

This crisis in baseball affairs is the result of the rumpus caused by the dismissal of Johnny Evers, manager of the Cubs, by President Murphy. This move, in the opinion of nearly every National and American League man as well as the Federal League promoters, is most untimely.

With the Federals raiding organized ball for players and the declaration of the new organization that it is prepared to fight to the death, the Murphy-Evers episode seems to be the last straw.

The American League's warlike attitude toward the National League is said to be due to several things in addition to the Murphy-Evers matter. The American League club owners believe that the Brooklyn club's failure to sign Tinker was the first big National League mistake which gave impetus to the Federal League movement.

The Federal League promoters admit that whatever success they have had up to this time has been largely due to the blunders of the National League magnates.

There is a movement on foot to drive Murphy out of baseball, but the talkative Chicago magnate declares that he is in the game to stick.

HANK O'DAY SAYS HE WILL GIVE EVERS A CHANCE TO CHOOSE

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Hank O'Day the new manager of the Chicago Cubs, said today that he would have a new second baseman before he left New York. He said:

> I will not dispose of Evers until he informs me personally that he will not play under my supervision. When he does that then I will take up the question of trading him. Before I do I will learn to which club he prefers going. I would not want to make any trade unless he was satisfied.
> Evers cannot blame me for taking this position. A few days before I came down here Murphy asked me if I would entertain a proposition to manage his team. I thought he was joking. He said he was not. He told me that Evers was not to manage the club and that if I did not want the position some one else would get it. What else could I do but tell him I would consider it. No one can blame me.

Murphy and I came down here together and on the way arranged the matter. I wanted a position as manager, as I informed the people in Cincinnati that I would be back in that capacity before long, to prove to them that I am a manager. I was not certain of this new job until after the meeting yesterday.

"I feel that I have a better team than I had with the Reds and the club that beats us will have to win the pennant. I will follow the same system of training the players as I did with the Reds and that is to have them out on the field twice a day. We have a lot of surplus material on hand and there will be no difficulty in filling the place at second.

CHARLEY MURPHY SAYS HE WON'T BE FORCED OUT OF THE CUBS' PRESIDENCY

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—"Any attempt to force me out of the presidency of the Chicago National League team will be strenuously opposed," declared Charles Webb Murphy. "No one can force me out of the club," he said. "I hold the majority of the stock. I am in baseball for the fun of the thing as well as the money and it certainly is a paying proposition."

Speaking of his firing Johnny Evers as manager, the Cub president said:

> I have just as much right to change managers as any corporation has to change its heads. In disposing of Evers and putting Hank O'Day at the helm I believe I have made a change that will be for the best interests of the club. Evers did not prove satisfactory and I feel that in O'Day I will have a better manager.

Pfaff's Beer
"Best Brewed Because Brewed Best"

GEORGE E. PHAIR SAYS:

SOME LEAPER.

Old King Cole is a jumpy old soul,
And a jumpy old soul is he.
He jumps to the Feds and back again
Like a California flea.

P. S.—We beg to state that there are no fleas in California. Neither are there any mosquitoes in Tampa, Fla.

If Charlie Weegham were only an ivory merchant instead of a hash dispenser he might be more expert in the art of picking up ball players.

If we were running a new league our first move would be to hire T. Roosevelt, one of the very best ivory hunters extant.

And if the Feds want a regular P. G. in their league it behooves them to send a scout to Steubenville, O., to sign one Tom Needham.

Mordy Brown has been given his unconditional release by Cincinnati, but how can you give away something you haven't got?

The report that Mr. Gilmore has received a "black hand" letter only strengthens the prevalent impression that he is one of our best little press agents.

Frank Baker generally comes across with a home run, but in his latest attempt the best he could do was a double.

The New York legislator who demands that baseball be taxed 5 per cent, evidently does not know that baseball magnates never make any money.

There are those who suspect that it will be easier for Johnny Coulon to whip Kid Williams than to pry Sam Harris loose from that $1,000.

Reading Mr. Fleischmann's words of wisdom, one is led to believe that Joe Tinker lost his job because he was brazen enough to attempt to manage his team.

As we figure it out, Willie Ritchie would be a regular lightweight champion if he were only a lightweight.

We think we have discovered how Battling Levinsky does his training. He does road work from one club to another.

We don't know whether Thomas A. Edison is studying perpetual motion, but if he is it behooves him to study a youth named Battling Levinsky.

If you were in the Federal League and were playing against the Chicago team, would you care very much if the outfield of the Chicago team were composed of Messrs. Wickland and Zwilling?

The Pilgrim A. A. and the Cleveland A. C. will meet at the Arena tonight in a game which is expected to be one of the most sensational of the season.

The Cleveland boys are hailed as the champions of the United States, having won seventeen, lost two and tied four games this season. Irving, Poland, Elder and Captain Winters played here with the Cleveland team two years ago, which aggregation defeated the Boston Athletic Association and then dropped a 2 to 1 game to the Intercolonials.

Cleveland is playing the fastest hockey of the season right now and expects to win from both the Pilgrims and the B. A. A.

VISITORS OUTWEIGH 'MIDGETS.'

The Pilgrims will be greatly outweighed by the Cleveland A. C., but as regards speed and ability to carry and shoot the puck the visitors will meet their match in the Pilgrims.

The highly perfected combination play of the Pilgrims is expected to give the visitors a great deal of trouble while attempting to break up the "Midgets'" attack. The Pilgrims have been practicing very hard of late and now every man is in fit condition to go through a long, hard contest.

M'LEAN IN MATCH RACE.

Between the halves, Bob McLean, the champion amateur speed skater of the world, and O'Sicky, the Cleveland speed merchant, will skate a quarter of a mile match race.

McLean and O'Sicky have just completed the tour with the amateur skaters, during which the former won seven firsts and eight seconds.

The appearance of Bobby McLean at the Arena will mean that all the lovers of speed skating in Boston will be on hand to give the young marvel from Chicago a hearty welcome and to enjoy his wonderful skating ability. After the race with O'Sicky, McLean will skate one-half mile against time, and it is very possible that he will lower the indoor record for this distance.

ALL STARS BLESSED BY POPE PIUS

ROME, Feb. 12.—[illegible] in audience at the Vatican [illegible] John J. McGraw [illegible] Giants, [illegible] American [illegible] Charles Comiskey [illegible] White Sox.

After greeting each member of the teams with [illegible], the Pope said:

Every sport is permitted when pursued without malice. I see that these men have two of the most precious possessions—health and youth. While their youth cannot be preserved I will pray to God to preserve their health.

Gazing benevolently on the baseball players the Pope blessed each one of them, and wished them a bon voyage and success in their fights for the pennant next season. He added a special blessing for the relatives and friends of the players who are awaiting their return to the United States.

The Pope also blessed the souvenirs the men are taking back with them from the Vatican after their tour of the world. Thousands stood in the rain and watched the baseball players enter the Vatican grounds. Moving picture operators, photographers and reporters accompanied them as far as the entrance to St. Peter's square.

After entering the Vatican the players were taken to the Pope's private apartments. [illegible] through the royal [illegible] and St. Damascus court, where the Swiss guards the papal gendarmes [illegible] duty.

All the attaches of the Vatican were deeply impressed by the fine appearance of the athletes and they could not refrain from commenting on this fact.

When Pope Pius approached every one of the athletes fell to his knees. Visitors were deeply impressed with the solemn atmosphere. The Pope walked with a steady step to the baseball players and placed his hands upon the head of each and blessed them.

Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, who is a devout churchman, congratulated the Pope on his recovery from his recent serious illness. Mrs. McGraw, who accompanied the players, was much affected by the ceremony.

"The Pope's face," she said today to the AMERICAN correspondent, "is the saintliest and the sweetest I ever saw."

"The commanding figure of the Pope is most striking, and I shall never forget how he looked when he entered the room," said Mr. Comiskey.

McGraw [illegible] later paid their respects to Cardinal Merry Del Val, the papal secretary of state, who received [illegible].

BOWLING FACTS AND COMMENT

[illegible]

Sammy Green and "Bo" Partford were the big factors in Murray's victory. Green got 350, while his side partner [illegible] 3 2 of the maples.

You can't stop that Wentzell. The Salem boy scored 340 in the weekly matches of the A. O. U. W. series.

Mt. Benedict Council is still setting the pace in the Knights of Columbus League and many of the followers of that league are of the opinion that the Somerville team will win the championship. One thing is certain, the K. of C. rollers are witnessing one of the best races since the league came into existence.

RILEY'S SPORT GOSSIP

Tip from an Ancient Bean Eater.

"Say, [illegible] old Cub stuff; get [illegible] kid," he said
[illegible]
"That Tinker to Evers to Chance stuff is dead,
Now [illegible] to Mason all to [illegible]."

DRUNK with power, [illegible] Charley Murphy—the man who "ran a [illegible] [illegible] Evers [illegible] Federal League [illegible] the doors of the organized [illegible] prove that will probably [illegible] on their [illegible] put Murphy himself down [illegible] it will boost the baseball revolution.

• • •

EVERS had a five years' contract with Murphy. It was a regular organized baseball contract — one of those charitable, philanthropic instruments that the magnates have [illegible] of those contracts [illegible] from the player [illegible] As long as Murphy wanted to keep Evers [illegible] Murphy and Murphy [illegible] usually wholesale guy [illegible] Evers could go and sell shoe blacking [illegible] but he couldn't [illegible] baseball again [illegible] to pay.

WELL, with the Federal League [illegible] outside the doors eager to devour Evers and pay him $10,000 for the privilege of devouring him [illegible] league [illegible] did what they have never done before. They gave Evers [illegible] Wonderful condescension! Imagine a baseball player being permitted to tell his side of the story. It was such an epoch making affair that all of the up-to-date sporting pages in America today put it in their headlines.

• • •

GOVERNOR JOHN K. TENER of Pennsylvania, whose Attorney-General handed out the "dope" that such contracts are inviolable—BY THE PLAYERS—took Evers aside and urged him "not to be rash" and sign with the Federals. Evers was not rash. Notwithstanding he is a temperamental ball player and manager Evers has organized baseball right by the neck today, and it looks like he is going to be sensible enough to hang on until he makes organized baseball or some other kind of baseball come across with a large chunk of currency before he makes his next move.

EVERS says that the National League directors, late yesterday guaranteed his contract with Murphy if he, please, only wouldn't jump from the National League. And yet, only a week ago the same directors were quoting Attorney-General Bell and ex-President Taft, whose family furnished the capital to put Murphy into business — in effect, that they needn't do any such thing.

SO out of the baseball war, Evers has accumulated a "sure thing." And the magnates have revealed the fact that they are scared clean through. And, within a week you are likely to see another exodus of big league players to the "outlaws."

• • •

IN the meantime, Ban Johnson, president of the American League, professes, in published interviews, that there will be no compromise with the Federals, and that he has no interest whatever in the warfare now on. Knowing Ban Johnson and reading between the lines, we will hand out to you this suggestion—that every knock on organized baseball just now is a boost for Ban Johnson; that if things con[illegible]

ALREADY [illegible] Moreover, [illegible] leading [illegible]

AND [illegible] Evers' release [illegible] Ebbets' round [illegible] of Tinker [illegible] the outs [illegible] revolution [illegible] get their revenge.

• • •

CHARLEY MURPHY [illegible] Evers that when Evers [illegible] failure to [illegible] Murphy $[illegible] bet [illegible] Evers and Chance [illegible] cost Murphy and organized baseball [illegible] whole lot more than $[illegible] before they get through.

• • •

WHILE on the subject [illegible] of Jimmy McAleer [illegible] Jimmy [illegible] thinking fellow [illegible] work up from the bottom [illegible] his money [illegible] every cent of [illegible] Red Sox. He made a big [illegible] small investment [illegible] was forced out [illegible] of the world with the [illegible] White Sox [illegible] to the coast [illegible] Tris Speaker, the Red Sox [illegible] After the world's series [illegible] McAleer as president of the Red Sox [illegible] Speaker's salary from $6,000 to $9,000. When the world tourists reached the Pacific Coast, McAleer induced Speaker to stick to the party. Since then McAleer has [illegible] uninterrupted [illegible] with Speaker.

• • •

SPEAKER has not yet signed with the Red Sox. The Sox have [illegible] with him to [illegible] McAleer's influence [illegible] knows what Speaker [illegible] knows [illegible] He was one of the principal jumpers himself when the American League was organized.

What has McAleer told Speaker on this trip?

What will Speaker do?

Where does McAleer stand in organized baseball today?

Think it over.

Warren Advertises for a Stenographer and Is Overwhelmed With Letters.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"THERE'S a bunch you can wade through," and Warren threw down a great bundle of letters tied together with a stout twine.

"Not all those?" Helen turned over the bundle in amazement. "Surely you did not get that many answers to just one advertisement?"

"That's the crop," grimly.

Helen had untied the string and was now glancing hastily over the envelopes. In varied handwriting they were all addressed to "H. 166, The American." She started to open one.

"Better wait till after dinner. I want to be fortified with a good square meal before I tackle that job. It's sickening—getting those from one ad. for a twelve-dollar a week stenograhper."

Even Warren had been touched by the mute appeal of all these letters. There were at least two hundred—and all but one must be disappointed.

"A 200 to 1 chance on a twelve-dollar job," as he expressed it.

All through dinner Helen thought of that mass of letters waiting to be opened. It was appalling that so many women should be seeking this one, very moderately paid, position. While Waren had given Miss Perry eighteen dollars—she had worked up to that from twelve.

When they went back into the library, Helen got the paper knife for Warren, a hat pin for herself, and spread out the letters on the table.

Warren opened and glanced over a dozen or more, then took up his evening paper with a discouraged—

"You pick out the best of 'em. I haven't the patience to go through that lot."

Helen was intensely interested. Were it not for her aching sympathy for so many girls seeking employment, she would have enjoyed going through these letters, with their varied glimpses of character.

She was opening now a square white envelope of good quality.

"Dear Sir:

"Replying to your advertisement in today's American, I should like to apply for the position.

"I have had two years' experience in a lawyer's office, and six months' with the Blank Publishing Company, and have references from both these places.

"Trusting that you will give me the opportunity of calling,

Very respectfully,

"EDNA M. WOODWARD."

Helen laid this one aside; its brevity, the handwriting and the stationery were all good.

A DISGUISED LETTER

The next was typewritten, and from the scrawled signature it suggested that the typewriter was used to disguise the weakness of the writing.

When she had opened several more Helen was surprised to find how similar they were. Apparently most of them were modeled after some specimen letter of application, given in the business schools.

And yet there were distinctive characteristics about them all. The stationery ranged from the cheap bluish-white paper to frivolous note paper, tinted, initialed or even monogrammed. Helen wondered why so few had realized the value of a good heavy quality of plain white stationery.

"Dear, listen to this one. Doesn't this sound rather good?

"I feel that I am particularly fitted for a position in a lawyer's office, as my father was an attorney in Baltimore, Md., and I was his stenographer for a number of years. I have just come to Boston and am anxious to secure a position here."

"Yes, that sounds all right. Let's see it. Perfumed, eh?" with a disapproving sniff. "Well, we don't want her."

"Walter R. Blake—why, that's a man!" mused Helen, glancing at the signature of another letter. "He writes well, too. Dear, would you want a young man stenographer?"

"Nope!" with conviction.

"Why?"

"Don't tend to business. Not as dependable as a girl."

"Well then," triumphantly, "if women are as good or better workers than men, why are they paid so much less?"

"Because they'll work for less."

But at that moment Helen was too engrossed with another letter to dwell upon the unfairness of this.

The silence of the next half hour was broken only by the sound of the paper knife as it ripped open the envelopes. Now and then one went on the chosen pile, but most of them Helen passed over with a sigh.

"See here!" Warren looked up from his paper, "can't you tell by the envelopes? Just open the best looking ones, or you'll never get through."

"Oh, no—no, we mus read them all. They at least deserve a hearing. Dear, isn't this pathetic? A girl up in New Hampshire who is willing to work for less than $12 until she can prove her 'ability'—and she spells ability with an e! Yet she's a graduate of Blank Business College."

"That's the trouble," shrugged Warren. "These business schools grind them out by the thousand. They're spoiling good cooks and houseworkers, and making blamed poor stenographers. How many answers did you get last Fall when you put that ad in for a maid?"

"Only three."

A SUGGESTION

"Three, eh? And for a stenographer I get about two hundred! There's your solution for your stenographer on starvation wages. Let some of these girls go to cooking schools, take some special course—say pastry-cooking. How long do you think they'd be without a job?"

"Yes, I know, dear. But I can understand—it's the social difference. In an office they think they'll have a better chance of marrying—and after all that's what they're hoping for."

"Huh, they read these newspaper yarns of the millionaire broker marrying his stenographer. Well they stand about as much chance of that as a snowball in"——

"Oh, here's a wonderful one! Do listen to this:

"'I am an expert stenographer and typist. Can operate any standard machine at ninety words a minute, and can take the most rapid dictation and transcribe my notes with absolute accuracy. Can also take dictation in both French and German, and have studied law.'"

"Pass that up, she knows too blamed much for $12 a week."

But on the whole most of the letters were modest, earnest, straightforward applications for work. And in spite of Warren's cynical comments, the average was very high. There were at least seventy-five letters from experienced stenographers, any one of whom Helen felt would be a capable and conscientious worker. Of these seventy-five she had selected twenty which she now pushed toward Warren.

"Great Scott, I can't see all those! Half a dozen's enough."

The selection of these final six was the hardest of all. One by one Helen discarded the others, fourteen with the unpleasant feeling that somehow she was responsible for these girls not having a chance.

Warren glanced over the chosen six, with a brief:

"All right. Want to write them now and finish up the job? Tell them to call day after tomorrow, Thursday, before twelve."

"But, Warren, shouldn't the letters be in your handwriting?"

"What difference does that make? They'll be glad enough to come. Here, this form will do," and on one of the envelopes Warren scrawled:

"Please call Thursday between eleven and twelve for an interview regarding the position for which you apply. Yours truly,

"W. E. CURTIS."

Helen got out some of Warren's business stationery, and with painstaking care copied this form to each of the six chosen applicants.

"Why in thunder don't you buy fifty cents' worth of stamps and keep them here?" growled Warren, when Helen, knowing that he always fumed at her inadequate writing supplies, reluctantly admitted that she had only two stamps.

Later, when he grumblingly started out for them, Helen turned to the mass of letters that still littered the table with a hopeless,

"Dear, what SHALL I do with all these?"

"Chuck 'em in the waste basket. What else can you do with them?"

But as Helen slowly gathered them up, she felt she could not throw them away. Every letter had its atmosphere of hope and expectancy—and now to send them down with the garbage in the morning!

Then she got the kitchen step-ladder chair and with the letters climbed up to the top shelf of the hall closet. As she pushed some boxes aside to make a place for the package she found the shelf was warm from the pipes that ran up through the wall.

It was foolish, of course, but Helen laid them far back on the shelf with a sense of pleasant content, as though she was putting something almost human into a safe, warm and secure place.

"Hello, what are you doing up there?"

Warren, who had come back, now stood before the closet door.

"Oh, dear, I—I couldn't quite throw them away! You may want another stenographer some time—or we may hear of some one who does. I couldn't send these letters down with the waste paper. Somehow I like to think of them being up here!"

"Hold on there be careful" as Helen started to climb down.

He reached up his strong arms and swung her down. Then, with one of his rare moments of tenderness, he stooped over and kissed her with a laughing,

"You little sentimentalist, you!"

Quite Right

"Patience and perseverance will accomplish all things," was a favorite saying of an old miller.

He had made this remark in a train one day on the way to market, when a pompous individual in the corner turned to him crossly and said:

"Nonsense, sir. I can tell you a great many things which neither patience nor perseverance can accomplish."

"Perhaps you can," said the miller "but I have never yet come across one thing."

"Well, then, I'll tell you one. Will patience and perseverance ever enable you to carry water in a sieve?"

"Certainly."

"I would like to know how."

"Simply by waiting patiently for the water to freeze."

The Bee and the Flower

By NELL BRINKLEY

HERE are these two great players, DANNY, the canty, spritely matinee idol, chubby and floss-headed, the roving son of Venus, Aphrodite, and A GIRL, the daughter of Eve, tender, wealthy with youth, his leading lady in their oldest, loveliest parts, "The Bee and the Flower":

It chanc't a bee did flit that way
(After a dew or dewlike shower),
To tipple freely in a flower.

* * *

He drank so much he scarce could stir,
And so she took the pilferer.
And thus surprised (as filchers use)
He thus began himselfe t' excuse:
"Sweet Lady-Flower, I never brought
Hither the least one thieving thought:
But taking those rare lips of yours
For some fresh, fragrant, luscious flowers,
I thought I might there take a taste
Where so much sweetness ran to waste,
Besides, know this, I never sting
The flower that gives me nourishing,
But with a kisse, or thanks, do pay
For Honey that I beare away.'
This said, he laid his little scrip
Of Honey 'fore her ladyship,
And told her (as some tears did fall)
That that he took, and that was all.
At which she smil'd and bade him goe
And take his bag; and this much know,
When next he came a-pilf'ring so,
He should from her full lips derive
Honey enough to fill his hive.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LET HIM GO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and in love with a man the same age. He tells me he loves me, but when we have a little quarrel he goes away and never comes back until I write to him. Now he is gone again, and I would like your advice. Should I write again or let him go.

E. L.

YOUR humility denotes lack of force of character. Never be the first again to make overtures. Let him go, and don't fret if he never comes back.

ALL'S FAIR

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deply in love with a young lady, but a friend of mine, who is away on business, is also in love with her. Do you think I should take advantage of his absence to make my feelings known?

E. D. O'N.

"ALL'S fair in love and war." The girl is the one to choose. If you want to win her, let her know that you are a suitor to be reckoned with.

HEED THE OBJECTIONS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man my age. I love him and know my love is returned, but my folks object. He is a very nice young man.

HEARTBROKEN.

ARE the objections based on fact? Believe me, my dear, parents are so concerned in the welfare of their children that there is little objection based on prejudice. He is "a very nice young man" means little in actual worth. You must heed your parents' objections.

THAT DEPENDS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen, and have been writing to a man the same age. He has stopped writing to me. If he should write again would you advise me to answer?

MATHILDA.

IF your correspondence was warranted by credentials in the first place, and his reason for not writing is credible, there is no reason why you should not answer his letter. If you never hear from him again do not take it seriously.

The day will come, she sed to Pa, wen you men will find that insted of being the lords of creashun you are the footmen to the wimmen, the real supermen after all.

I suppose that time may come, sed Pa, tho I am sure I do not want to live to see it. I suppose that almost anything is liabel to happen a thousand yeers from now, at the rate the peepul are getting foolish. Blessed wimmen, sed Pa, the forerunners of reel sivilizashun. Here are sum of the wonderful things that they keep alive by thare encurragement:

Hats with fethers three feet high
Dancing with [illegible] peeple

Barefoot dancing on the stage
Slit skirts & [illegible] gowns

That is the noabel werk, at sum of it, that the deer ladies are doing, sed Pa. There is no telling ware it will end.

Thank goodness it is not that kind of wimmen that are going to direct the destinies of the human race in the happy years to come, sed Ma's old maid frend. It is a different type of wimmen, sober, deep thinking, fearless wimmen like me, she sed. Wimmen that realize how littel & how insignificant is man after all. Dosent you know that men are littel & insignificant? she asked Pa.

No, I doant know it, sed Pa. Maybe sum of the men that lissen to that kind of talk are littel & insignificant, like the husbands of sum suffragets, but you have no idea, Pa sed, how many men thare are that wares seventeen collars & runs thare own homes & fambly without any advice from spinsters or woman's clubs. & thay are usually the men that are the best to thare wifes, too. I am the skipper of our fambly ship, sed Pa, & my wife is the first mate. Littel Bobbie is the cabin boy, & both of them are under my orders, Pa sed.

That is the eternal man of it, sed Ma's old maid frend. That is what maiks me a man hater. Men all think they are the grate I Am.

No they doent, sed Ma. I am not a man hater, Ma sed, beekaus my deer husband is always noabel & good to me & I am proud to be the first mate to such a captain. He is a darling & I luv him with all my hart.

Then the old spinster got kind of cold & went home, & after she was gone Pa felt so good that he gaiv Ma $50 to buy a new tailor sute. I know it was $50, beekaus I herd Ma ask for it.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

URGENT occasions demand urgent measures. When a little lie will not save a man he feels justified in telling a big one.

There had been signs of the approaching conflict for several days. Mrs. Lysander John Appleton had had an evening gown made; Daysey Mayme in addition to her new gown, had purchased a new wrap; Lysander John's dress suit had been cleaned and pressed and every roar of protest from him had been met with the argument that they had to accept invitations to let the world know they were invited, and that he must come home early that evening and get dressed on time.

He pleaded everything from business engagements to neuritis and blind staggers, he told his little lies glibly, and realized when on the way home that night that the time had come when he would be justified in telling a big one.

The clock struck six. No Lysander John. Seven, and his wife's anger had given way to apprehension. Eight, and she was a victim of the wildest fears. Nine, and she and Daysey Mayme had removed their party dresses, and sat huddled before the front window watching for him.

Ten, and they had stopped watching for the figure of a man crossing the square, and were looking for ambulances and undertakers' wagons and stretchers, and all the gruesome sights that darkness can conjure. Eleven, and Mrs. Lysander John was on the lounge in hysterics and Daysey Mayme was declaring in one of those rare periods of sanity that come to the unmarried that, thank Heaven, she wasn't married, and had a man to worry over, when the doorbell rang!

The door opened to meet Lysander John! Dazed, trembling, with eyes filled with fear, he could only gasp, "Don't let her get me!" Don't let her get me!" as he staggered into the room and fell in a heap on the floor.

It was an hour later before he could tell a coherent story. He was coming home from the cars, he said, when a blonde woman sat down beside him. He noticed that she gazed at him with admiring eyes, but he remembered that he was married to the best woman on earth, and steadily looked the other way. Suddenly she crowded closer to him, and he felt a stinging sensation in his left arm. And that is the last he remembers.

He had a dim impression of being led off the car and down a side street, of a dark hall way, a brightly lighted room and something sweet to drink. The next he knew he was standing in front of his own door and it was midnight.

"A poisoned needle," he gasped, "and here it is!" pulling a darning needle from his left coat sleeve.

And such is the tie of duplicity and understanding between all male kind that his son Chauncey Devere, pulled out of its eye a pink wool thread that matched the ball in his mother's darning bag, before his mother and sister had caught sight of it.

The American and Pathe Freres Collaborate in a Plan to Amuse, Entertain and Educate Boston.

Here is the second part of a new two-reel Pathe Freres photo play which will be presented at motion picture houses today for the first time. It deals with one of the grimmest industrial problems, the "fire-trap and sweated industry," and shows in graphic scenes how in one case at least retribution was visited upon the responsible person. The old Pathe favorites appear in the cast.

PART 2.

Davis tried for years before he was able to forget what he did on that day after he left with Mrs. Emery's words ringing in his ears. To his protests that her factory was a fire-trap—she had returned laughter. To his pleas for the broken men and women who worked there, she had listended with anger. And when he told her the inspectors were coming—might by prosecution "hurt her socially," she had disdainfully replied:

"I rely on you to see that they make no trouble."

He found the inspectors in his office when he returned to the factory. They had found conditions—as he knew—terrible. The law was laughed at. Fire escapes were a mockery. Lint and scraps lay everywhere ready to flare up at the touch of a spark. There was for all his big heart, a streak of weakness in Davis. He knew he should have told the inspectors to prosecute—force Mrs. Emery into the open. But he loved the factory—loved its good name—and he was weak. He bribed them.

SMOKES A CIGARETTE.

It was one morning at the busiest hour, a week later, that Jacob Schindlauer—a sewing machine operative—decided he must have a cigarette. He sneaked into the seclusion of the back stairway; and when his smoke was finished, pinched the stub between thumb and forefinger and tossed it away. He returned to his work.

But the cigarette fell in a little patch of lint and scraps. Five minutes later flames swept up that narrow stairway and filled the second floor of the building. Those on that floor went out the windows—reckless of glass or screen. Those above were cut off—only a flimsy fire escape for hope. When Davis reached the factory ten minutes later screaming girls were dropping down this ladder like drops of water from the end of a wet stick—and upon each girl the flame had set its red mark.

Herzog, whose health was broken by long hours in the stifling factory—he was the man of whom Davis had spoken to Mrs. Emery—escaped from the fire with slight injuries; seventeen, however, had died. But Herzog's injuries made it impossible for him to work. And the home in which he lived was owned by Mrs. Emery's estate.

HE COULD NOT HELP.

Mrs. Herzog—in this crisis—sought Davis; for the manager had always been their friend. But she found the man ill—broken by the shock of the fire, and by a sense of his own guilt. He could not help; and in desperation she determined to appeal to—Mrs. Emery.

Mrs. Emery agreed to see her—but only to torture the desperate woman with her unconcern—to listen idly, playing with the Pomeranian while Mrs. Herzog poured out her story. At length she said:

"Really—I can't do anything."

"Can't you get an extension on our rent."

Mrs. Emery yawned. "Oh, that's all in the hands of my agent."

There lay upon the living room table a gold brooch—carelessly cast there. When Mrs. Herzog departed—she clutched it in her hand.

ARRESTED AND TRIED.

She was arrested—brought to trial. The spectators leaned eagerly forward when at last Mrs. Emery took the stand—to identify her brooch—to accuse the wretched woman. Herzog himself sat miserably watching.

Davis, the manager, on his sick bed was tortured by sorrow and remore. It was his bribe to the inspectors that had led to the fire. The greater guilt lay upon the woman—but he too must share the blame. A sudden resolution came to him; he climbed feebly from the bed and reached for his clothing.

Mrs. Emery told her story briefly without passion.

"The brooch was on the table when this woman came," she said, scornfully eyeing Mrs. Herzog. "When she left it was gone."

She hesitated. It seemed there was nothing more to come. Then suddenly there was a stir in the rear of the court and a haggard figure appeared—the light of delirium in his eye. It was Davis. He levelled a finger at Mrs. Emery on the stand—cried hoarsely:

"You murderess—in your silk." The court turned to see—turned back to watch Mrs. Emery. She blanched—her soul shaken. This would mean her social ruin—the wreck of her dearest hopes.

"It's you that ought to go to jail," Davis cried wildly. "You—murderess!" He repeated the word again and again. "You that wouldn't pay a cent for fire escapes. Seventeen girls killed by your greed. You told me to bribe the inspectors. They know. Oh, I can prove it."

Mrs. Emery tottered to a seat, and as Davis' maddened words poured on, she collapsed—a broken woman. And when the law released Mrs. Herzog—laid its hands on Mrs. Emery's arm—a cheering, jeering crowd followed the murderess to her cell.

COUNTER BOND SALE NETS TWO MILLION IN DAY

State Treasurer Mansfield's "over-the-counter" sale of more than $6,000,000 worth of State bonds is proving more of a success than its originator predicted. The first day after the announcement of the public sale brought bids for about $2,000,000.

"The result even at this early stage of the sale," said Treasurer Mansfield today, "has more than justified my most sanguine expectations. Up to the present moment, and before the advertisement of the bond sale has been published, I have received bids amounting to about $2,000,000, which is but little less than one-third of the whole offer.

"Savings banks, private investors, trustees with fiduciary means have bid with an alacrity which I expected, but which nevertheless is very satisfying to me. The denominations range as low as $100, and the highest bid, from the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank, was for $750,000.

"Despite gloomy vaticinations as to the outcome made by men of many years' experience in the banking and bonding business, I had faith in my own judgment, which I backed against theirs. I kept faith with the public, and that faith has been fully vindicated."

Other large bids, besides that from Mr. Evans of the Five Cents Savings Bank, were four lots of $174,000, $77,000, $75,000 and $35,000.

Lincoln's Birthday--One Hundred and Five Years Ago He Was Born

Great Men and Great Deeds Rise from the Ashes of Those That Are Gone—as the Oaks Rise from the Ground Where Other Oaks Have Fallen. Study LINCOLN. He Is the Example of Our Day

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

The world in its rush stops for a moment to honor the birthday of Lincoln.

This earth has seen many great men, fortunately, and this nation has had many. It would be sad if it were not so.

But the greatest with whom any man LIVING has spoken is Abraham Lincoln.

Men good and powerful that have died and gone back into the earth are THE SOIL from which strong men and good thoughts spring.

When you walk in a great forest, every tree that towers above you has its roots in the mold formed by trees dead and decayed.

And as you walk among the great men of history, every one of them has the roots of his thought, purpose and ambition in the ashes of men dead before him.

Great men that are to come, in this and other countries, will find their strength and inspiration in such men as Lincoln dead and gone.

America especially finds its inspiration, hope and deepest affection in this splendid character, this simple man who came at the right moment to save the nation and renew the national life.

The beauty of Lincoln's character is in his simplicity, his goodness, his modesty and gentleness.

He was a great GOOD MAN.

What Lincoln was, any man may be who starts with a good body, a good mind, humility and with that thought uppermost which we place below his picture on this page.

"With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness for the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on."

Lincoln did not know what he would do, or how he would do it.

But he was simple, studious, earnest, modest and determined.

He had courage in his modesty, and method in his determination.

He would have been content to remain the simple man of the country. He would have been content to receive the appointive office which he solicited, and could not get.

He would have been supremely happy could he have lived to enjoy the gratitude of the nation that he reunited.

But there is no doubt that he was content humbly and quietly to meet death when it came, and to pay with his life for the high privilege of saving a nation and setting an example to a dozen generations.

"Malice toward none, charity for all, FIRMNESS FOR THE RIGHT," those were Lincoln's mental characteristics, and any man may have them, who from day to day will study his problem, study his fellow men, and do what he thinks is right as the opportunity and the need arise.

You all know Lincoln's history, but each year it should be told in a few words.

He was born in a cottage that had no wooden floor, no glass window. He played on the dirt floor of that little cabin as a child. His mother died before he had known her. His stepmother providentially, like thousands of other stepmothers, cared for this boy as though he had been her own.

She helped him as he painfully learned to read.

She encouraged him as he did his little sums and wrote his few badly written words, by the light of a wood fire, on a shingle—planing off the shingle when he wanted to write more.

She encouraged him to walk ten miles and more to get one book.

He grew up a worker with his hands and a thinker.

He was one of the first to realize that women should be the equals of men. Unlike some other white men, he was at least willing to do for WHITE WOMEN what he was destined to do for BLACK MEN.

He had no great confidence in his own judgment, no egotism. He never said and never believed that negroes were the equals of white men. BUT HE BELIEVED THAT THEY WERE ENTITLED TO JUSTICE, AND THAT THEY SHOULD NOT BE MADE SLAVES.

He was abused as every great man has been abused. When he went to New York to speak, he was even accused of bringing with him a black woman in a shameful relationship. He replied quietly that he would neither degrade a black woman nor make her his slave. He would let her alone.

Lincoln had no plan except to think honestly, to speak courageously and plainly, to do his duty as his duty came.

He worked under the vilest and most shameful attacks. And often the best men in the country were those that attacked him. They did not realize what he was, or what load he carried.

At last, the victory was his. He had lived through the dreadful strain.

And then, this man, who had lived so simply, talked and acted so bravely and so modestly, was murdered by a maniac.

The world admires him because of the work that he did, and because of what he was.

He was only what thousands and millions of other Americans have been and will be. He was an honest, sincere, simple man. His opportunity came when the whole nation needed courage, honesty and sincerity.

Fortunately for this nation, there are thousands like him in the humble homes of this country, and other thousands in other countries throughout the world.

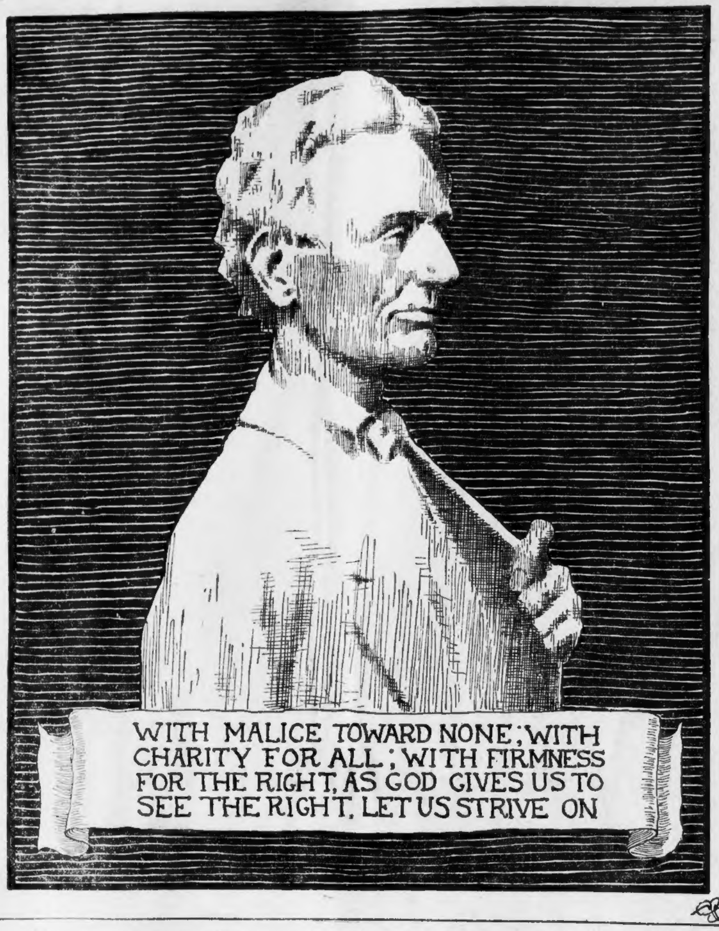
This is a great nation, worthy of such a man as Lincoln, because it possesses and always will possess, and at the right time produce THE LINCOLN FOR THE RIGHT MOMENT.

MALICE TOWARD NONE; CHARITY FOR ALL.

Those are the words of Lincoln, greater than any victory on the battlefield, or any political victory.

Practice that teaching, and the spirit of Lincoln is with you.

LINCOLN'S VOICE IS STILL HEARD



WITH MALICE TOWARD NONE; WITH CHARITY FOR ALL; WITH FIRMNESS FOR THE RIGHT, AS GOD GIVES US TO SEE THE RIGHT, LET US STRIVE ON

You cannot write better words than those printed here under Lincoln's picture. This is the birthday of the greatest man with whom men living have spoken. In his memory and in his example find today inspiration that will help you to be worthy of such a compatriot and such a friend. Lincoln, like all great men, is the friend of every man who comes after him and learns from him. (See editorial).

Let Every Patriotic American Read and Pay Heed

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts
BY HIS EXCELLENCY
DAVID I. WALSH,
GOVERNOR:

A PROCLAMATION

By an Act of the Legislature adopted in 1905 the Governor is delegated to remind the people of the Commonwealth that the twelfth day of February is set apart as

LINCOLN DAY

It is peculiarly fitting that the Governor of the Commonwealth should by an annual proclamation request that the anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth be commemorated with proper ceremonies.

Born in poverty, far removed from the busy marts of men, springing from the lowliest and least-educated class, nursed in a mere hunter's shack, Abraham Lincoln experienced in his early youth all those humiliations and was surrounded by all the obstacles that would appear to defeat the realization of the ordinary ambitions of life.

More than any other figure in the history of our country does his life give proof of that equality of opportunity which is the inheritance of all American citizens.

He was educated because he was a student of men; he was eloquent because he spoke from the soul; he was a statesman because he brought to the public service of his country sound judgment, linked with a heart full of sympathy for the weak and the oppressed.

When he signed the great Proclamation which struck the shackles from the slaves, he then wrote his name high upon the roll of those world figures whose fame rests upon their service to liberty and humanity.

On Lincoln Day let the flag be displayed in every part of the Commonwealth, let Lincoln's picture be uncovered in every school, every shop, every home—wherever men meet to labor, to rest or to pray.

Let the revered survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic come together and once more extol his virtues; let our school children assemble in their school buildings, over which the emblem of freedom floats, and again learn of this man's accomplishment for his country; let us all pause in the midst of the busy activities of the day, to give thanks to Him who gave us this great leader and patriot, in the hour when our country most needed a Lincoln, and seek "the further guidance of that Divine Hand by which the destinies of nations and individuals are shaped."

Witness, His Excellency the Governor, at Boston, this thirty-first day of January in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-eighth.
DAVID I. WALSH.

By His Excellency the Governor,
FRANK J. DONAHUE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Manners in the Home

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today."

In one's own home, in everyday life among one's own family, is the best place to practice good manners. The habit of being courteous should be part of every well regulated life; not from a mere wish to appear well before guests or strangers, but because good manners are the outward and visible signs of inward kindness and sincerity.

Regard for the feelings, rights and claims of others is a mark of a well-bred person. The person who is suave and agreeable in public or when wishing to make a good impression, and who is rude, snappish and disagreeable at home shows that his or her breeding is pinchbeck. Good manners are not assumed for the purpose of deception. In fact a refined person is never deceived by superficial, insincere manners.

People who are naturally, instinctively in command of a gracious, courteous manner regard it as something very precious, a heritage of good breeding to pass on to their children. And so in the home, parents have it in their power to give to their sons and daughters an education in refinement, and to bestow an unconscious influence which will be of use and power to them for life—the fine, courteous consideration of others.

Boys and girls who learn to have the best manners know that they are not for use on especial occasions, or for especial people, but are part of an educated person's finest possessions.

Home may be made cheerful and gay, gloomy or sad by the manners, dispositions, tempers of the household. It is of importance to try to win the admiration of parents, brothers and sisters before winning the admiration of friends. Boys and girls who have good manners know how to make pleasant greetings. They have learned a habit of rising when an elder or superior enters a room. A son or daughter rises and offers a chair when the mother enters a room, or finds a chair for her, places it in a good position, or light for reading, or wherever may be desirable.

Parents who are careful in training their children do not indulge in idle talk, or gossip, remembering that children get a large part of their education in refinement by listening to good conversation.

Clark's "Gift" to the Nation

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

It was one hundred and thirty-five years ago that the indomitable Virginian, George Rogers Clark, started out on his ever memorable march for "Old Vincennes"—the terrible march that ended in the victory that gave us an empire larger than that of the Republic of France or the German Empire.

On all the earth there is no finer region than that once known as the "Illinois Country," or the "North West." With its splendid rivers and fertile prairies it is today the pride of our country; as well it may be, for it is the seat of a progressive population reaching up into the millions, with a wealth that runs up into the billions, while, young as it is, it is able to point to its "hustling" metropolis and say: "There is the second city in the United States of America, and the fourth in the whole world.

All of which was the gift of George Rogers Clark, the incorruptible patriot, who has been so poorly remembered that his resting place is unknown to the great majority of his countrymen.

Clark was as far seeing in statesmanship as he was ready in warfare, and conceiving the idea of winning for his country the great region north of the Ohio, he went to work with the energy and promptness that always characterized him, to make his idea good.

Laying the matter before Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, and other prominent Virginians, and gaining their hearty approval, Clark raised a little army of some two hundred and fifty men and resolutely set out on his epoch-making expedition.

When the Commissioners of Paris met in 1782 to settle the terms of peace between the United States and Great Britain, the value of Clark's work loomed large, for, thanks to Clark, our commissioners were able to say: "We are in possession"—and that settled it.

The widow of a scallawag husband can often look as sad as any.
